Kissinger Says Peace At Hand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger said today "peace is at hand" in Vietnam.

Kissinger told newsmen in an hour-long briefing that most major provisions of a settlement have been agreed to, but that one more negotiating session "lasting no more than three or four days" is necessary.

In breaking American silence on the status of the peace efforts, Kissinger said the nine points outlined earlier today by North Vietnam are essentially correct.

He also said: "I want to stress that what remains to be done is the smallest part of what has already been accomplished."

The presidential adviser said the remaining details are essentially linguistic and technical but need to be settled before the United States and South Vietnam can sign a pact.

He listed what were "six or seven very concrete issues that with anything like the good will that has been shown can easily be cleared up."

He included in his examples the need from the U.S. side to specify that no move will be made to grab additional territory between the time of the cease-fire and a political settlement.

He also said there needs to be clarification on the timing of the Vietnamese settlement relative to the settlement of the conflicts in Laos and Cambodia.

Earlier, Herb Klein, the White House communications director, had said a North Vietnamese broadcast saying the United States had agreed to sign an agreement but backed off was false. At a Cleveland news conference, Klein also rejected claims the United States is stalling negotiations.

Among other problems Kissinger said that need to be finally solved are whether Washington should sign the agreement on behalf of South Vietnam.

He said this was not a serious difficulty but it is understandable that the South Vietnamese, who have suffered the most during the war and who must remain under the settlement, should want to sign their own peace treaty."

On the issue of South Vietnam, the presidential aide said there were both agreements and disagreements by Saigon with the draft agreement.

But, South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu will accept a cease-fire, Kissinger said. He added that he believed the bitter expression of opposition from the Saigon leader earlier this week to a coalition government was addressed to "a previous plan, not this version."

Kissinger said the Oct. 31 deadline for signing a final agreement was set by the North Vietnamese.

While the United States had indicated it "hoped" to draft a proposed pact by that date, it never committed itself to such a deadline, Kissinger stated.

When asked what would happen if the Oct. 31 deadline passes without a signing, Kissinger indicated his belief that negotiations would continue.

"I can't believe that when this progress has been made an arbitrary deadline" will break off the negotiations, he said.

It is up to the North Vietnamese, Kissinger said, to set the date of the concluding negotiating session. He did not say where that final session should be held, but Paris has been the site of the previous sessions.

Kissinger went over the nine points already disclosed by the North Vietnamese, listing them in the main as a cease-fire to be observed in South Vietnam in place and "at a time mutually agreed upon."

U.S. forces would be pulled out within 60 days of the signing with a total prohibition against any infiltration of forces from North Vietnam either across the demilitarized zone or from Laos or Cambodia.

Military supplies to forces in South Vietnam will be banned except for replacement on a one-to-one basis of worn-out or damaged equipment.

All prisoners, military and civilian, are to be returned parallel to the withdrawal of American forces and will be completed within 60 days of the agreement's signing.

Kissinger said North Vietnam took it upon itself to account for all prisoners and missing in action in Laos and Cambodia as well as in Vietnam. And, he said, the return of American prisoners is not conditioned on the repatriation of Vietnamese captives.

On the political side, Kissinger said the agreement guarantees the right to self-determination by South Vietnam through a future "free and democratic election under international supervision."

This, he said, means the existing authorities of the Saigon government as well as the Viet Cong regime will remain in office and those two parties will negotiate "about the timing, nature and offices for which the elections will be held."

The Kissinger account also agreed with the North Vietnamese version generally concerning a National Council of Reconciliation "to help promote and maintain the cease-fire and to supervise the election."

During the question-and-answer session Kissinger was pressed about the timing of the agreement with the U.S. presidential election less than two weeks away. He said the American domestic political situation was never part of the American negotiating strategy.

He pointed out that the United States was willing to keep secret all aspects of the negotiation and reminded reporters again that the Oct. 31 deadline was Hanoi's idea, not Washington's.

Injuries Are Fatal

One late death and two minor area traffic accidents were reported today by the highway patrol.

An accident at 11:25 a.m. on Sept. 20 at the junction of Route T, Business 67 and Highway 67 one mile south of Fredericktown has resulted in the death of Archie R. Tripp, 64, of Mill Creek.

He was transferred from Madison County Memorial Hospital in Fredericktown to St. John's Mercy Hospital in St. Louis County where he died Wednesday at 12:02 p.m.

The accident occurred when Tripp pulled out from Business 67 into the path of a tractor- trailer driven by Lenny Carlson, 32, of Palos Hills, Ill.

At 5:05 p.m. Wednesday four miles south of Fisk on Route FF, a pickup truck driven by James Gambill, 32, of Fisk backed from a driveway into a car driven by Fred Sullivan, 75, of Fisk. Juanita Sullivan, 59, a passenger, received minor injuries and was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

A car driven by Shirley Jean Hall, 19, of Hayti ran off the road and overturned early today injuring a passenger, Sharon Lacy, 18, of Hayti. She was taken to Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti with a possible concussion.

The accident occurred at 1:15 a.m. on Highway 84 six miles west of Hayti.

Cafe Employe Knocked Unconscious, Robbed

MOREHOUSE — Police are searching for the man who robbed the Running Horse Cafe of about $160 early this morning after knocking an employe unconscious.

Mrs. Edna Mae Cummins of Sikeston Route One was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital for examination after she was found unconscious at the cafe by John Summers of Canalou.

Mrs. Cummins told highway patrolmen that a tall, thin man wearing dark pants, a blue shirt and a short, blue jacket walked into the cafe about 7:30 a.m. and asked for a cup of coffee.

When she said the coffee was not ready, he asked for change to buy cigarettes. Mrs. Cummins said she walked back to the cash register and heard him behind her. He then struck her on the head with his hand and reportedly sprayed something in her face. She was unconscious for about 15 minutes.

Police said they could not tell what he sprayed in her face, and Mrs. Cummins could not describe the container used.

Cpl. Melvin Moyers of the highway patrol said about $140 was taken from the cash register and $20 from Mrs. Cummins' billfold.

Mrs. Cummings said the man appeared to be in his early 40s, about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighed about 155 pounds.

Attendants at the service station next to the restaurant told police they saw no cars at the cafe at the time of the robbery.

City Marshal Slim Rodgers said he had driven by the cafe just before Mrs. Cummins opened the restaurant and saw nothing unusual. Police say the man apparently left the area on foot.

"The attorney general's office could be of much greater support to local crime fighting than it is today," Hamiltonq said. "We have examined the qualifications of both candidates and we believe Spain's exprience as a working trial attorney. . .and his knowledge of the Legislature in which he served six years clearly calls for our whole-hearted endorsement."

Hamilton said the endorsements came from all areas of the state and represented around 60 of Missouri's 114 counties. Some endorsements came from assistant prosecutors, as well as prosecutors.

"BUTLEY": THE
THEATER OF INDECISION

As usual, the 1972-73 Broadway theater season will feature a number of British imports. Among the more controversial of these is "Butley," a play written by Simon Gray, which was first staged in London last year. It is scheduled to open at the Morosco Theater in a limited engagement on Tuesday, Oct. 31.

It seems safe to say that Americans will applaud the acting of the play's star, Alan Bates, and of the predominantly English supporting cast. Beyond that, however, "Butley" raises a number of disturbing questions about the state of contemporary theater. Briefly stated, "Butley" is the story of a greying university lecturer faced with the breakdown both of his marriage and of his friendship with a fellow teacher. There are definite overtones of homosexuality, handled here much more forthrightly than in such a play as "Tea and Sympathy."

Some of the waspish repartee of the title character is very witty indeed. The audience laughs with genuine amusement. Once outside the theater, however, playgoers tend to feel let down, put off in some way. Possibly this post-curtain reaction is symptomatic of what ails modern drama. The indecisiveness and inconsequentiality of the current stage is deadening.

The London Evening Standard's critic, Milton Shuman, praised the "stark, unsentimental approach to the homosexual relationship" in "Butley." On a deeper level, though, the play remains unsatisfying. What can it tell us about the essence of human relationship? By this measure, "Butley" falls flat. The confusion of identities, symbolic of a sexually broad-minded age, spills over onto the stage. The contemporary theater has little to gain by indulging in ever more superficial titillation of an already jaded public.

BLACK MAN,
WHITE COAT

Statistics on black scientist are discouraging. Only 600 received a science Ph.D. during the last century.

The Cornell University medical college graduated almost 900 doctors during the 1960s. Two were American blacks.

Nothing is more needed than Negro doctors. In New York City, for example, there is one doctor for every 200 persons. Black neighborhoods have one for every 12,000.

Medical doctors' degrees are received by one white in 560, while only one black in 3800 gets one. Recently, though, the picture has begun to change. Of the 92 freshmen admitted to Cornell's medical school last fall, 11 were black and two Pureto Rican. Last year, 697 blacks entered medical schools, an increase of almost 50 percent.

Matching Cornell's progress is the University of Pennsylvania and its program for teaching black high school students the rudiments of lab science. Reaching the most motivated students, Penn's work-study program has trained 70 blacks.

Giving black science experience helped them win college grants. Gone are the days when science was a white only field. All 70 of the Penn students have gone on to college or technical schools.

For these students, the project was fruitful. They put their skills to use in their neighborhoods. Family and friends were proud of black students who wore white coats and mastered previously white field.

Blacks, who sharply feel the doctor bind, seem on their way to becoming the solution to their own problem.

Should Marijuana
Be Legalized?

Sen. James Eastlend's (D.Miss.) Senate Internal Security subcommittee has just finished holding some remarkable hearsings on the worldwide narcotics traffic, but for some curious reason the media failed to give them extensive coverage. The topic of the subcommittee's probe was clearly provocative and newsworthy, while the witnesses including former Marine Gen. Lewis Walt and Dr. Olav J. Braenden, director of the United Nations Narcotics Laboratory, had a certain star quality about them.

Dr. Braenden as one of the key witnesses gave some conclusions on cannabis (the Marijuana plant) but these were given scant attention by the press. For the past six years, under instructions from the U. S.'s Division of Narcotic Drugs, he has made cannabis research a top priority.

Cannabis is the scientific name for the marijuana plant. Ordinary marijuana comes from the leaves of the plant, while hashish, nearly five times as concentrated as marijuana, is derived from the resin of the plant.

Before testifying, said Dr. Braenden, he had contacted a number of scientists in different countries who had been collaborating on various aspects of cannabis research. Dr. Braenden conversed with Prof. W. D. M. Paton of Oxford University; Dr. Ola Rafaelsen of Denmark; Prof. C. Miras of the University of Athens, and with Prof. Cornelius Salamink of the University of Utrecht in the Netherlands.

"Among scientists working in the field," Dr. Braenden told the subcommitte, "it would seem that there is general consensus that cannabis is dangerous - opinions differ, however, on the degree of the danger to the individual and to society. In my opinion, it seems that, as progressively more scientific facts are discovered about cananbis, the more one becomes aware of its potential dangers."

Dr. Braenden says there is evidence that with repeated use, cannabis tends to build up in the body tissue. Moreover, there may be considerable impairment in driving ability after oral ingestion of cannabis, and rat experiments have resulted in a very high percentage of birth abnormalities.

Even more alarming, Dr. Braenden testified that Dr. A. M. Campbell and his colleagues of the Bristol Royal United Hospital have found "significant evidence of cerebral atrophy in young smokers."

In his own investigation nto the subject of marijuana, Gen. Walt said he disagreed sharply with the government's commission on marijuana -- the Shafer Commission -- which, in effect, recommended the legalization of cannabis for personal use and for distribution in small quantities. Gen. Walt said he agrees with the commission's belief that youthful mairjuana smokers should not be sentenced to several years in prison, but he still favors fining smokers by way of "underscoring the point that marijuana smoking does damage to society."

Among the many officials of foreign governments with whom Walt and his staff discussed the Shafer report, not a single one "shared the tolerant attitude of the Shafer Commission toward cannabis. In Jaman, France and other countries we were told that the Shafer Commission report has caused consternation on the ranks of those concerned with problems of drug control, and that it seriously undercut their efforts to combat the growing use of marijuana in their own countries."

Walt said he was surprised particularly that the Shafer team, in the course of its foreign travels, did not once take time to check in with Dr. Braenden whose U. N. office is a clearing house for some 30 laboratories working on heroin and marijuana research.

Thus, said Walt, it is difficult to accept the Shafer report as "gospel." The retired Marine general suggested that far more research should be made into the effects of cannabis before we embark on the radical course of legalizing marijuana as advocated by the Shafer Commission.

AN IMPORTANT

In spite of assumptions to the contrary, consumerism is not the sole property of the professional consumer protector. Industry has its consumerists – representatives of companies involved in various consumer education programs -- who probably know a lot more about the nuts and bolts of consumer protection than some of the roving bands of crusaders. Much of their work is done beyond the glow of the limelight.

One such person is Mrs. Elaine Pitts, an executive of a large trading stamp firm. In an interview with a correspondent of the Albany, New York, Times - Union, she talked about the myriad problems confronting the housewife today. She observed that, "The consumer is probably faced with more complex decisions now than ever before. There's a real need for consumer information and education and, although progress is slow ... largely because of the many thousands of items on supermarket shelves alone ... we are making headway. Responsible business is recognizing this and trying to respond to the need." She noted her own company's efforts in this direction. Its activities include the developing of consumer programs for clubs, organizations, teachers and educators throughout the country. She stressed the ever-increasing need to learn how to judge and evaluate. This means reading labels these days "... even though time is all too often the very thing she (the consumer) has the least of."

Mrs. Pitts' philosophy of consumerism prefers the education of consumers to the adoption of police- state type controls that rest on the inference that all consumers are fools. It is an important distinction.

Why do you suppose the Globe Democrat features Governor Hearnes's use of the state plane but says nothing about President Nixon making all of his trips in Air Force No. 1, wherever he is going? Now if the President can travel all the time in a plane paid for both in original cost and in operation by we the people, why can't the Governor of Missouri do the same thing? Way back in 1918 we had permission to fly a plane to Post Field, Fort Sill, to Lawrence, Kansas, to see the Missouri- Kansas football game. There were three officers with a K.U.background who were going to ride with us. But came the day, and it was Thanksgiving Day, the wind was blowing 30 miles an hour and we couldn't make the trip. Now if we had gotten away, the taxpayers would have had to pay for the cost of the flight. But we were not in politics so it wouldn't have caused any sensation.

WAR ON CRIME

Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy of New York City has completed his third year in office. He finds the crime problem as tough, maybe toughter, than it was three years ago. In an interview on a national television program, Commissioner Murphy said that crime has many faces today. Some of it is organized. Some of it is street crime. There is official corruption involved. Half of the offenders, he estimated, are using narcotics.

Mr. Murphy also dealt with the problems of the court. He declared that the court dockets in his city were so overloaded that judges have to accept guilty pleas in many cases and let defendants off with light sentences. There simply is not time enough to have contested cases. This seems to be the unhappy situation in all cities now. Defendants who are guilty and ought to be kept off the streets are released in short order and continue to play their trade of criminal activity.

The commissioner is opposed to a federal police force. He is correct. But he thinks that the states should apply more muscle in the control of crime. He is also correct in this belief. More stringent state laws on bail bonds and closer relationships of state police agencies would help curtail criminal activities. Most states have fine police intelligence agencies. Detectives rely on information to break criminal cases. Modern communications make this exchange possible.

Commissioner Murphy has done a good job in New York with a situation that was almost out of hand. His frank estimate of the crime problem we face nationally should be appreciated and his words of wisdom absorbed. Let local, state and county law enforcement agencies cooperate more closely for maximum results. We can still whip the problem of crime.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — A confidential communication between two top Pennsylvania officials contains evidence that Rep. Dan Flood'd office has been deeply involved in fixing state contracts in exchange for campaign funds.

Flood, one of the most powerful Democrats in Congress, represents the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania where fires reging through abandones mine sites have created an air pollution crisis.

With money raised by special bond issue, the state has been paying contractors to put out the fires. Alleged irregularities, however, caused an investigation by State Auditor General Robert Casey.

Casey passed on his findings to Pennsylvania Attorney General Shane Creamer in a series of letters marked "Personal and Confidentiai. One of the letters deals with a contract awarded to a firm headed by Jack Dixon, a candidate for the Pennsylvania legislature this year.

"A confidential informant advised me," wrote Casey, "that he had reliable information to the effect that pressure was brought to bear on principals in the firm of Kaminski Brothers of Avoca, Pennsylvania, not to submit a bid on this contract.

"Specifically, he stated that early in November (1970) the Kaminskis were called by Stephen Elko, administrative assistant to Congressman Daniel Flood, to attend a meeting in the Congressman's Wilkes Barre office.

"At this meeting Elko allegedly said, 'We don't want you to bid this job. This is the way we get campaign funds. There will be other jobs.'

"On two occasions during October (1970), according to the informant, Jack Dixon came to the Kaminski plant in Avoca and told them that they should withdraw and that this was a way to get campaign funds."

The letter also cited a report from the same informant that the Kaminskis were visited by an equipment supplier in the area who urged them not to bid on the contract and "impressed upon Kaminski 'how powerful Dan Flood is.'"

Flood's aide, Elko, denied any wrongdoing and said he could not remember any meeting with the Kaminski brothers in Wilkes Barre. Flood also denied intervening in the state contracts. "I wouldn't go near any state contract with a ten-foot pole," he said. Our efforts to reach Dixon failed.

The Casey findings are now under investigation by the state crime commission.

Poly-Clean' cleaned out

The federal government's purchasing agency, which spends billions in goods, services and construction, has quietly acted to make as sure as possible that not a penny goes to Mafia-infested contractors.

General Services Administrator Arthur Sampson is amending his regulations after learning to his astonishment that the federal government's law-abiding agencies were cleaning their floors with a detergent peddled by a member of the late Vito Genovese's crime family.

The GSA had innocently contracted for at least $51,000 worth of Poly-Clean, produced by GNR Corporation in a rundown Palmer, Mass., plant. Its distributor was All Purpose Chemical Co. of East Orange, N. J.

All Purpose, as it turns out, was secretly owned by well-known Mafia Hoodlum Thoman "Timmy Murphy" Pecora, according to testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee. GNR also reputedly had Mafia links.

Thus, ironically, the very federal agencies trying to clean up organized crime were themselves being cleaned up by a heavy duty Mafia-linked product. The situation was clearly intolerable for a law and order administration like the present one.

GSA, therefore, as soon as it learned of Poly—Clean's dirty ties, put a memo in its files to remind itself to refer any future Poly-Clean bids to the Justice Department's organized crime section.

Sampson has also sent out instructions and begun formally stengthening GSA regulations and so that all bids from firms linked to the underworld will be sent to Justice for review. Those genuinely infested with syndicate members will be denied contracts under Sampson's proposed regulations.

Actually, GSA has been informally turning down Majia bids for years when they knew of the Mafia connection. Sampson himself, when he was GSA's Public Building Service Commissioner, managed to stop a government rental contract on the West Coast from going to a Mafia-linked landlord.

Footnote: David Weiner, president of GNR, contended that his company has no Mafia links whatever. "Poly-Clean is a good product," he told us from Palmer, Mass., "and it's made by a good, clean company."

Confidential Crisis: How Billion-Dollar Soviet Grain Deal Was Salvaged

NEW YORK — There were some recent unreported dramatic hours when it appeared that the billion-dollar grain deal would go down waterfront drains; that the Soviet people might go hungry after all; that with a new confrontation replacing consultation cataclysms might be triggered all along the line from this vast harbor to Hanoi with an intermediate stop in Moscow.

It all began in the catacombs of the Commerce and State Departments. At first none of it got through to President Nixon.

How Richard Nixon reacted, how he moved and operated when he learned that his intricate plans were about to be howitzered by some very clever Russian state traders and some U. S. government officials purring over Soviet flattery is a profile of Richard Nixon's era in the Oval Room.

This saga began Sept. 18 when Jesse Calhoon, leader of the Marine Engineers Union, one of Mr. Nixon's earliest labor supporters, was telephoned by some American shipowners. They told him they had just been briefed by the State Dept. They told Calhoon they had been told American freighters would carry as much newly sold grain to Soviet ports as the U. S. S. R. merchant vessels carried -- and that could be nothing.

This meant that if the Russians decided not to use their own craft, but chartered the less expensive low-wage "third world" or other foreign flag ships, American shippers would get none of the business, American seamen, members of Paul Hall's Seafarers and Joe Curran's National Maritime Union, would not get "bread," nor would ship masters, radio shack operators, marine engineers, et al.

Calhoon elphoned Andy Gibson, then Assistant Secretary for International Affairs in the Commerce Dept., and with waterfront argot and anger, asked how come? Gibson, whom Calhoon later called a liar, said the report wasn't true.

The only "commitment" the naive Gibson had from the Russians was an official letter stating they "intended" to use one third American ships to haul the life- giving grain to the U.S.S.R. No commitment -- not from the Russians, nor the State Dept., nor the Commerce Dept. people.

On Sept 21, American labor and ship management officials met in Washington with the Maritime Administrator who admitted there were no commitments from the Soviets.

"Every maritime union got mad," explained Calhoon later. "And we let them know . . . if that was going to be the name of the game there was going to be no cargo moved to Russia."

And there would not have been. Period. Just like that because among those angered were the Longshoremen's Ted Gleason, without whose men nothing can move from Great Lakes, Atlantic and Gulf ports. And without Paul Hall's Seafarers very little can be shipped out -- even if the dockers load the wheat. By this time the international trade agreement called for Russian pruchase of some 16 million tons worth about a billion dollars, say the maritime people.

Now the scene shifts to the Connally ranch in Texas. This is Sept. 22. It had been a long day for Dick Nixon. He looked beat that night. He had been on the receiving line for almost two house. Then he spent an hour and a half moving from table to table.

He made every table. He spoke. He listened. At one of the tables sat Jesse Calhoon who briefed the President on the problem. The President said he'd look into it. No notes. And then on to the next table.

The next day Calhoon was telephoned by a deputy assistant to the President, Henry Cashen, a specialist in labor and aide to Charles "Chuck" Colson, Mr. Nixon's very special special counsel, head of the White House's daily-meeting "Counterattack" group. Calhoon was told to meet Mr. Nixon on Sept. 26, here at the Waldorf in John Ehrlichman's suite.

At about 7:30 p.m. that evening in walked the President. Calhoon said, in effect, that the maritime leaders were ready to blow up a storm. They felt they had been crossed by both the Russians and "the bureaucrats."

"I know the agreement that was made with the maritime unions," said the President, "and I fully intend to live up to that agreement. You are going to get your full one-third share and it is going to be mandatory, and it is going to be in the bilateral shipping agreement between the U. S. and Russia."

On Oct. 14 the United States and the Soviet Union signed a very specific maritime pact. The intentions of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics were not taken for granted. In hard language the agreement calls for American and Soviet freighters each to carry one-third of the American grain. If the Russians don't want to carry a third in their own craft that's their business. Now wheat for the bread of Russia will definitely mean "bread" for the homes of American seamen.

So, the American maritime unions will deliver wheat to the Russians people -- and politically to Richard Nixon. If politics is the art of the possible, it also is the art of the quid proquo.

Nixon To Act On Bills From 92nd Congress; Forcasts Vetoes For Many

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be veto day at the White House today as President Nixon announces decisions on a big batch of bills sent to him by the 92nd Congress.

The White House promised action by midmorning on a number of unspecified bills and said Nixon's top domestic adviser, John Ehrlichman, would be on hand to explain Nixon's views.

The President has forecast "a number of vetoes" this week as he continues to review 115 bills passed in the final days before Congress adjourned.

Nixon alleges that Congress sent him measures calling for spending "far in excess of what we can afford" and he said he would use every weapon at his command to keep government spending as close as possible to $250 billion this fiscal year.

Congress rejected his demand for legislation setting a spending ceiling at that level and giving him sole authority to determine where cuts should be made.

Ehrlichman and budget director Caspar W. Weinberger have said a prime target for a veto is the bill appropriating $30.5 billion for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

Nixon first vetoed the bill last August when he labeled it irresponsible spending. The veto was upheld in Congress which then passed a new version retaining the same total figure.

But the new bill gives Nixon discretionary authority to cut 13 per cent of the total, reducing it to $29.3 billion. It also sets the $2.5-billion ceiling Nixon wanted on the social-services program which now provides open-ended grants to states.

The $30.5-billion total is $1.77 billion more than Nixon wanted.

Also on the possible-veto list is the Social Security-welfare bill. It passed Congress Oct. 17 but took over a week to go through procedural formalities and only arrived at the White House Wednesday. So the President has until Nov. 6, the day before the election, to act on it.

This bill provides a variety of increases in Social Security benefits and welfare payments plus a boost in payroll taxes to finance them. Welfare reform—Nixon's proposal as well as several compromise versions—was knocked out shortly before passage.

$23 Taken From Office Supply Here

Police this morning are investigating a break-in at Cox Office Supply Co. at 119 W. Malone Ave.

About $23 was reportedly taken. Entrance was gained by kicking in the back door, police say.

This is the second break-in at the store this week.

Missouri Supreme Court Rules For Lawyer's Case

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state Supreme Court has upheld a defense lawyer's contention that he can't be forced to represent an indigent client unless he is assured of being paid.

In an order issued Wednesday, the court gave Callaway County Circuit Judge Frank Conley until Nov. 3 to reappoint Granville Collins of Fulton under the public defender law and with reasonable compensation, or to appoint someone else.

Reappointment of Collins in the murder trial, the court order said, would have Collins serving in place of a circuit defender who has not yet been approved under the public defender law.

Collins asked Sept. 5 to be relieved as counsel for Solomon Williams because he was not assured of payment. The legislature set up a public defender system but did not fund it.

However, in September, $1 million was appropriaed for the public defender bill in a special legislative session.

Last year the court ruled that lawyers could not be required to represent indigent defendants after Sept. 1 without being paid.

Under the defender law, a judge can pay an attorney a reasonable fee in cases where the court has no salaried public defender.

Collins was the Callaway County public defender for several years until a Ford Foundation grant expired. Since then, the county has had no salaried public defender.

Williams and two other men were charged more than a year ago with beating to death a Fulton State Hospital doctor with a mop handle.

TWO PEOPLE WERE injured in a two- car accident Wednesday caused by a dog in the street. The accident occurred shortly after 5 p.m. in front of War Drum on East Malone, when a car driven by Peggy Lou Pearson, 306 Jarvis, struck a large German shepherd. Police say her car spun around and was struck in the side by a pickup truck driven by Morris Green of Route two. The Pearson woman was treated at Missouri Delta Community Hospital for scratches on the face, shoulder and thigh. Green was treated for bruises. The dog was not injured and left the scene.

Man Pleads Guilty To Driving Charges In Benton Court

BENTON-- After pleading guilty to charges of failure to exercise highest degree of care in driving Dennis Wayne Graviett of Oran was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail, fined $50 and placed on probation for one year by Judge Lloyd Briggs in Magistrate Court Wednesday.

Bond was set at $500 for William Tucker of Commerce and case was continued until Nov. 1. Tucker is charged with writing a bad check to George Guze in the amount of $7.77

Terry Allen McCormick of Sikeston had case continued until Nov. 1 to obtain a lawyer to defend him on charges of writing a bad check to Barkett's Big Star of Sikeston in the amount of $113.14. Bond was set at $500.

Robert Todd of Benton entered a plea of guilty to charges of selling a motor vehicle without certificate of ownership on Jan. 4. Todd was placed on two- year probation and ordered to make $25 restitution.

Case was continued until Nov. 1 for Lee Esters Cowser of Kansas City. Cowser is charged with driving 120 miles per hour in a 70—mile per hour speed zone.

Wanda Jewel Kinder of Chaffee pleaded guilty to charges of failure to display certificate of inspection approval and improper registration. She was fined $10 plus court costs on each charge.

Willis Malam of Benton was fined $10 plus court costs after pleading guilty to charges of careless and imprudent driving.

Case was dismissed on payment of costs for Joseph Lee Michael of Benton, charged with careless and imprudent driving.

Harry Ben Hornback of Oran was fined $20 with $15 set aside on payment of costs on charges of having no operator's licenses.

Larry T. Haehnlein of Whitewater entered a plea of guilty to charges of having no operator's license. Haehnlein was ordered to pay $25 costs or spend 30 days in the county jail.

Richard Claxton Fakes of Cape Girardeau pleaded guilty to charges of speeding and was fined $12 plus costs.

Atlas Stewart of Sikeston was fined $14 plus court cost after pleading guilty to charges of speeding.

A warrant was issued for Joseph Eugene Scherer of Illmo for failure to appear in court to answer charges of no operator's license.

British Pound Drops To New Low

LONDON (AP) — The British pound fell to a record low today for the third straight day, unsettling world money markets and affecting other leading currencies including the French franc and the U.S. dollar.

By early afternoon the pound was down to $2.3463 here, a drop of nearly a cent and a half from the close of $2.36 Wednesday night and a new all-time low.

One reason for the steep decline of the pound of more than five cents against the U.S. dollar this week has been a forecast by West German economic institutes that eventually the pound may be revalued at $2.25.

The British treasury issued a statement today claiming the German report was "without foundation."

Although the dollar showed some strength in London and Paris, it was generally weaker throughout the rest of Europe.

The pound has been falling because in the view of financial markets it was overvalued, due primarily to Britain's rate of inflation, the highest in Western Europe, and other economic troubles.

Once the pound had sharply declined however, lowering its exchange rates against other currencies, it left the weaker ones among them exposed as the next targets for reduced exchange rates, the French franc prominent among them.

Ann Landers

Straight Dope From A Former Addict

Dear Ann Landers: If had read the letter I am about to write a year ago I would have laughed it off-- but I hope and pray that every person who is on pot and considering experimenting with harder drugs for curiosity or kicks will read this and learn something.

As far back as I can remember I have been aware of mankind's problems and wished I could help alleviate human suffering. I pondered the meaning of truth and sought answers to "Who am I? Where am I going? Is life worth the struggle?"

I heard drugs could give added insight and new dimensions so I decided to experiment. Grass just laid me back and wasted my time, so I went to peyote and mescaline. Next I tried acid, and finally Speed. I took about ten trips before I overdosed and slipped into a cavernous hell. For ten hours I tried desperately to hang on to life. I prayed to a God I didn't believe in to keep me sane until the drugs wore off. I went as high and as low as a person can go and still not come back. I found not truth but fear; not comfort, but agony; not light, but darkness. When the dawn broke I was so grateful to be alive I swore off drugs forever.

Yes, I was through with drugs, but drugs were not through with me. Four months later the flashbacks began. Walls began to move, rockets began to go off in my head. Dizzy spells, weird noises, sleepless nights, terrifying images, maniacal laughter cut deep into my skull. My heart wouldn't stop pounding. I was swimming in sweat-- helpless against these horrible sensations.

Before I took drugs I knew I had problems, but at least I knew I was sane. Now my problems were overwhelming me and I wasn't sure of anything.

Please don't worry about me, Ann, I'm getting professional help and crawling back, an inch at a time. I'm going to make it, but it's a slow process. I just hope my letter connects with some cat who is where I was a year ago. If such a person is reading this now, please don't say, "You're a nut. It won't get me. I can handle it. It's all in your head." What do you have but your head, man? Your head is a masterpiece of electro-chemical engineering. Don't mess it up with drugs like I did.--- Peace In The Pacific Northwest

Dear Friend: I can add nothing except my thanks for a moving report from someone who's been there. God bless and write again.

And here's another shameless plug for my booklet "Straight Dope On Drugs." Send $1 to Ann Landers, Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654. Enclose a long, self- addressed envelope with 16c worth of stamps. No preaching. Just facts. The proceeds of this sale are going to Synanon in San Francisco.

DearAnn Landers: Last week my boss dismissed a fellow worker. Now I am doing her work as well as mine. He made a big deal out of the raise I'd be getting. Today my check came. The raise is $2 a week. What do you think?--- Morristown Lackey

Dear Morris: If you are able to handle your work as well as the work of a colleague, you didn't have enough to do-- or the recently departed co-worker wasn't doing much, which may be why she is no longer there.

Your letter reminds me of some interesting statistics. The United States Department of Labor announced that 90 million people in this country are employed. It didn't say how many were working.

Ann Landers discusses teen-age drinking-- its myths, its realities. Learn the facts by reading, "Booze and You-- For Teen- Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35c in coin and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope.

Librarian Courses At Kelly

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Southeast Missouri State University plans to offer two graduate workshops in the field of library science on Saturday at Kelly Elementary School in Benton, Dr. Willard J. Morgan, director of school services at the university, has announced. Each will be for one semester hour of credit.

Enrollment for one or both workshops will begin at 8:45 a.m. Saturday in the library of the school. In order to materialize, each workshop must have at least 17 students enrolled. The fee is $17 per workshop.

The first workshop, Cataloging of Non-Print Materials, will meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. this Saturday and again during the same hours on Nov. 4 and Nov. 11. It will be taught by Miss Elizabeth Brewer, instructor of library science at the university.

The second workshop, Organization of Non-Print Materials, will be taught from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Nov. 18, Dec. 2 and Dec. 9. The instructor will be Robert Gilligan, a visiting professor of education at Southeast Missouri State.

Credit earned in the workshops will apply toward certification requirements for school librarians, according to Dr. Morgan.

Dr. Morgan said the courses were developed at the request of librarians, audio -visual directors and teachers in the university service area.

They are designed, he said, to study and practice the preparation, circulation, management and use of non-book materials, simple mending and repair of audio - visual materials and the upkeep of audio-visual equipment.

Her Sign Reads 'Out To Sex'

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Instead of the typical "Out to Lunch" sign, the one in Susan Johnston's office at police headquarters reads: "Out to Sex."

That's because when the 26-year-old divorcee is not in the office she may be acting as a decoy in one of the city's high sex crime areas, walking through a park or along a street, waiting for someone to try to abduct or rape her.

She works with eight other officers, all men, in the sex crime unit of the crimes against persons division.

"I realize there is a potential danger in my job but I'm well protected," the petite mother of a 3-year-old girl said. "There are always about eight or 10 men nearby who assist in the capture."

Detective Johnston was to have lunch with President Nixon in Washington today and meet with members of the Justice Department.

She shares the honor with nine other officers who recently were presented awards at the Police Service Program at Salt Lake City, sponsored by Parade magazine and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

She is the only woman to receive the award.

Mrs. Johnston is in her final year of night school at Central Missouri State University at Warrensburg, where she is majoring in law enforcement. She started work in the police department seven and a half years ago.

She was promoted to police - woman upon completion of a training course and worked in the youth and women's division before being transferred to her present job six months ago.

"At first my parents were very upset about my job," the detective said. "They were afraid I would be depressed by my work. But now that they have seen nothing bad has happened to me, they've changed their minds.

"My mother calls me the hired gun."

In addition to her work in the sex crimes unit she gives lessons in self-defense through the department's community relations unit.

"Men that I date sometimes are bewildered," she said, 'but they feel well protected."

About her job, she said, "I know that I'm doing a job that needs to be done - getting rapists off the streets."

Detective Johnston said there is no discrimination against women in the police department.

"There is no differentiation between my duties and those of the men in the unit," said. "I handle all types of sex crimes.

Hosts Benefit Show

BELL CITY- The Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation Center is sponsoring a Musical Variety Benefit Show at the Bell City High School gymnasium Saturday at 7:30 p.m. All proceeds will go toward the annual underprivileged children's Christmas party.

Country— western, folk, gospel and pop musical numbers will be featured, along with ballet, acrobatic and comedy acts.

Some of those appearing include: Erika and Keith Voss, children of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Voss of Painton. Erika has performed in many area talent shows and was a participant in Mid— South Fair in Memphis, Tenn., last month. She has also given much of her time and talent to performing in area benefit shows. She will do a ballet on point to the "Doll Dance" for this show.

Keith has been first place winner in almost all of the area talent contests he has entered and has also performed for many area benefit shows. He will do a Raggedy Andy acrobatic dance routine.

Also featured in the benefit show will be Hal Mark McDonald, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis McDonald of Matthews, who is an accomplished pianist, having placed first in almost all area talent shows he has entered and was also a contestant at the Mid— South Fair Youth Talent Contest at Memphis.

He will play a medley of Roger Williams numbers with other old- time favorites included.

Arnie Stone and the Rebels of Vanduser will also appear in the musical. The group will be playing country- western songs. Stone has performed with members of the Grand Ol' Opry of Nashville, Tenn., and is a recording artist. He is a student at Scott County Central High School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Stone of Sikeston Route Four.

Larry Johnson of Sikeston has been guest soloist at several of the area churches and has participated in area talent and benefit shows. This will be the second year that he has performed in the musical benefit.

Another featured group is the Spanish Fleas, a group of teen— agers from Sikeston and Charleston. They have played in area benefit show and have been first place winners in local talent contest. They have also participated in the Mid— South Fair Youth Talent Contest, being finalists last year.

Members of the group include Kim Huffstutter, Lance Hesselrode, Jan Huffstutter, Mark Hesselrode, Glenn Bridges, Paul Jackson and Thom Lemmons.

Others slated to appear include the Hudson Family of Puxico, and Puxico's own Minnie Pearl and others with Denzil (Dink) Denny of Puxico as master of ceremonies. Attendance prizes will be given and refreshments will be available.

Pre— sale of tickets is now going on and may be purchased from members of the Bell City High School Student Council, who are assisting with the benefit show, or from staff members of the DAEOC Center in Bell City.

Speaker At Kiwanis Meeting

Ira Meredith, building committee chairman for the Jaycees, spoke to the Kiwanis Club meeting Tuesday night at Ramada Inn on the many uses and advantages of Sikeston Activity Center.

Meredith stated that, in 1969, the city applied for a grant from the government for the activity center and asked the Jaycees to sponsor it. Total of the grant was $262,123 and the city matched funds. They purchased the old First Baptist Church building at South Kingshighway and Trotter Street.

The first bid for the renovation project was $34,000 over what was hoped for, and a building committee had to take items out of the plans in order to get the bid down to the allotted amount, he stated.

Meredith said CAD Construction Co. of Dexter was contracted to remodel the building. The city accepted the building in February of this year.

The Social Security and Veterans Administration use offices in the building. C. F. Cline, unopposed candidate for state representative, will have an office one day a week to confer with people about problems he may help with as a representative of the area.

Others using the building are Church Women United, Senior Citizens, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, County Health Department, Little Theatre and Alcoholics Anonymous.

Administrators of the activity center hope Head Start will start using the building in February. The center should be paying for itself in one year, Meredith declared.

The United Fund donated $1,500 this year to the center.

Meredith also told the club that the auditorium in the center can be rented for $35 plus janitorial service.

Bill Mead of Associated Natural Gas was a guest of the club.

I'd Pick More Daisies

By SHARON K. MCNALLY
Area Home Economist

If I had my life to live over, I would try to make more mistakes next time. I would relax. I would limber up. I would be simpler and sillier than I have been this trip. I know of few things that I would take seriously. I would be less solemn. I would burn less midnight oil. I would go to bed early and get plenty of rest, so that I could enjoy the sunrise as well as the beautiful sunsets. I would take more trips. I would burn more gasoline, climb more mountains and swim more rivers. I would eat more ice cream and less bran. I would have fewer imaginary troubles. Yes:

I'd have fewer papers and smaller books, I'd have more capers and beauty-shop looks, I'd do my best to teach the little brats, But I'd strengthen my spirit with pretty hats. I'd wear fewer blouses and skirts, Straight lines and staid browns and blues, I'd get lots of pretty lacy dresses, And I'd wear them all with high-heeled shoes!

You have known lots of school teachers like me. You see, I am one of those people who live sanely, sensibly, prudently -- minute after minute, hour after hour, day after day, year after year. Oh, I have had my moments! But if I had my life to live over again, I'd have more of them -- without a thermometer, a hot water bottle, a gargle, a raincoat and a parachute. If I had it to do over again, I would go more places and do more things, and I'd travel lighter than I have.

If I had my life to live over, I would look for the good in others, and in the things about me, instead of always seeing the unpleasant things of life. I would have more sweethearts. I would go to more dances. I would sing more songs and play more games. I would go to more circuses and ride on more merry-go-rounds. I would pick more daisies.

If you hold your nose to the grindstone rough, And keep it down there long enough, You will soon forget there are such things as brooks that babble and birds that sing! These three things will your world compose: Just you, and a stone -- and your darned old nose!

Yes, as I think it over, I'd look for a little more fun in life. I'd pick more daisies!

Woman Assigned To Ship

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When Navy Ensign Nelson steps onto the deck, the sailors knock off the salty talk.

Rosemary Nelson has become the first woman officer in the Navy to be assigned a sea-going billet.

When the hospital ship Sanctuary steams out of Hunters Point Naval Shipyard next month, she will be in charge of 39 stewards and three disbursing clerks.

She'll also be the ship's paymaster.

"That could make me very popular or very unpopular, said the pert, 24-year- old brunette from Walla Walla, Wash.

But Miss Nelson, who reported aboard the Sanctuary a week ago, says she doesn't expect a sea of troubles in her new assignment.

"I won't have any problems different from any other young officer," she said. "I'm an officer and I expect my men to follow my orders."

And she says she's not worried about whether she's "saluted and such.

"It's the attitude that counts. A man who is lax on saluting can be a good worker."

But Miss Nelson, who designed her own shipboard work uniform of a long-sleeved white blouse and black slacks, will have more than her men to worry about.

She has donned rubber boots and an oxygen breathing appratus to fight fires at a damage control school, training which will prepare her for a supervisory role during shipboard emergencies, said her department head, Lt. Harry Wright.

She says she may even try to qualify as an officer of the deck and navigate the big, white-hulled Sanctuary, even though her specialty as a supply officer doesn't require it.

"I think it would be fun and good experience," she says.

Grownups present were Bonnie Armstrong and Mary Mattson, New Madrid; Dorothy Naney, Gloria Chaney, Linda Robinson, Sondra Landers, Martha Rodgers, Liz Scott and Donna Garrett, all of Canalou; and maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Armstrong of Matthews.

Sending gifts were Angela Jamerson of Canalou, Theresa Johnson of Matthews and Sandy and Doug HacRey and Andy Keene, all of New Madrid.

Frank Smith Promoted

MEXICO — Cadet Frank Smith of Sikeston has been promoted to master sergeant in the Reserve Officers Training Corps unit at Missouri Military Academy.

Lt. Col. John Starke, commandant of cadets, said the promotion was made for scholastic, athletic and leadership progress attained in the M.M.A. Cadet Corps.

Missouri Military Academy is an 84-year- old school for boys in fourth through 12th grades. Last year its ROTC unit was named "honor unit with distinction" by Fifth Army inspectors.

Cadet Smith is the son of Mrs. David Blanton, 1103 N. Kingshighway, Sikeston, and Frank Smith of West Palm Beach, Fla.

Kit Bond Kidding Days Over?

(Reprinted from the July 20 issue of The Belle Banner in Bell, Mo.)

A residency suit filed Wednesday at Jefferson City challenging the qualifications of State Auditor Christopher S. (Kit) Bond to run for the Republican nomination for governor has caused reverberations throughout the Republican and Democratic parties.

The open claypits where children have lost their lives not to mention how they have marred the beauty of our countrysides, attest to the money that is behind this man Bond for whatever he wants at the expense of the people and state. Kit, fortunately for himself, is a branch of the A. P. Green Co. of Mexico, Mo., whose wealth in the form of fireclays was extracted from the land hereabouts. What has been taken away is marked by the ugly pits with water. Not all raping of the good earth was done by the Green Company but most of them were. The beauty of the Belle Community Fair grounds awaits the mining by the Green Company who owns the mineral rights to the grounds, and when that time comes windows of homes all about are to be smashed by the explosions. So you can understand what it's all about. The state is not playing with penny firecrackers when it sets about having a rich man like Kit Bond level with the people.

Not only does Kit command all the wealth he needs for whatever purpose he desires, whether it be for governor of Missouri or for clearing his name, he also has trustworthy John 'Jack' Danforth, the attorney general, to intercede for him and to see things the "checkerboard" way, as generally conceded in the past. Danforth also is an interpreter of the holy writ, bringing together both what is morally right with what is legally so. It is almost an unbeatable combination.

Democrats particularly are aware of the possibility that Bond could be ousted as auditor if the residency decision goes against him. In this case, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, a Democrat, would be able to appoint someone to complete Bond's term, as he would do were Bond nominated and elected. Bond has said otherwise but even his enemies give him credit for knowing what any high school student knows. That no person may hold two elective offices at the same time.

Bill Bradley, New York Knicks basketball player, already has been suggested to Hearnes as a successor. Bond's term runs for two more years.

Bradley, of Crystal City, had considered running this year for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer, but decided against it at the last minute.

He is ineligible to be auditor at the present, because he will not be 30 years old until July 28, 1973. The auditor must meet the same qualifications as the governor, who also must be 30.

Other Democrats mentioned as possible successors to the auditorship include, John C. Vaughn, state comptroller and budget director; Thomas A. David, director of the Highway Department, and James I. Spainhower, candidate for the Democratic nomination for treasurer.

The qualifications for governor include residence in Missouri for 10 years. Bond has admitted that in filling out an application to take the Georgia bar examination in 1964 he stated that he lived in Atlanta.

However, he contends that he did not give up up his Missouri residency, because he always maintained his voting address in the state.

Dr. Martin S. Greenberg, St. Louis county Democratic chairman, has said that if the Missouri Supreme Court disqualified Bond as a governor candidate, Democrats would sue to remove him as auditor, inasmuch as the qualifications are identical.

The complexities of the case have raised numerous questions:

(1) If Bond is removed as auditor, does Haskell Holman, the incumbent defeated by Bond in 1970, return as auditor? One provision of the law says that an officeholder holds his post until a successor is duly elected and qualified.

(2) If Bond is removed as auditor, are the audits performed by his office for the last year and a half legal?

(3) Can the suits challenging Bond's gubernatorial candidacy or his right to remain auditor be appealed to the federal courts, thus leaving a question mark hanging over the primary and general elections indefinitely? Some lawyers think grounds could be found for such an appeal.

(4) Would the Missouri Supreme Court refuse to remove Bond from the auditorship on the grounds that he already had been qualified for office, thus forcing Democrats in the Missouri House to impeach him if they wanted him out?

One provision of the state constitution says that the Legislature shall be the sole judge of the qualifications of its members, and the Supreme Court has refused to oust elected legislators on this ground. But there is no such provision on elected state officials.

The suit against Bond as a candidate for governor was filed by State Representative R. J. (Bus) King Jr., Clayton, one of Bond's opponents in the Republican primary.

The suit includes a copy of the application signed by Bond to take the Georgia bar examination. It is on file at the Fulton County (Atlanta) Superior Court. Bond was a law clerk in a federal court there in 1964.

Bond signed the application, in which he said his home address was 55 Pharr Road, N. W., Atlanta, and that he had been a resident of the State of Georgia and had resided in Georgia at that address for six months.

Bond said he was confident that he could win any court test because he had kept his voting residence in Mexico, Mo., since 1960, when he was 21.

He said that the Democrats had brought up the question of his residency when he ran for auditor but had dropped it after he showed his voting record.

However, it had not been learned at that time that Bond had declared his residency in Georgia in such a formal application.

Danforth, a close friend and Republican ally of Bond, had been asked to begin local action to remove Bond from his position as auditor.

State Representative James E. Spain (Dem.) Bloomfield, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for attorney general, made the request.

But Jack is pretty busy these days playing the game cool to defeat Jimmie Kirkpatrick for secretary of state. The Danforth family hails from southeastern Missouri where brother Daniel is campaign manager for Jack's hand-picked Harold D. (Wheels) Kuehle, of Cape Girardeau county to become Jimmie's successor. No one has even asked who's backing Kuehle or if Kuehle is paying his pocket expense.

Kit has been generally confused about it all. He has purchased new autos and for avoiding payment of sales taxes claimed other states as his legal residence. Even to his education, not really a skeleton in the closet, as political scandals go. But another example of a politician not quite telling the whole truth.

In this case it concerns Bond's schooling, and where he got it.

Bond has been hiding the fact that he attended Deerfield Academy in Deerfield, Mass.

Bond entered Deerfield, an exclusive eastern prep school, after two years of high school in Mexico, Mo., and was graduated in 1956. When he was younger, he attended a private elementary school in Arizona for a few years.

In the biography that he has distributed to the press, Bond boasts that he is a "sixth generation Missourian, born inSt. Louis and raised in Mexico, Mo., where he attended grade school and high school."

In a voters guide prepared by the League of Women Voters of Missouri, Bond says he received his grade and high school education in Mexico.

And in the Official Manual of the State of Missouri, Bond says he was reared in Mexico, and "attended grade school and high school in Mexico."

In none of these sources does he indicate that he attended Deerfield, although he mentions that he was graduated from Princeton University with honors and was the top graduate in his class at the University of Virginia Law School.

Deerfield is a school reserved mostly for sons of the rich from throughout the country.

Caroline, Kit's wife, is telling the people what Haskell Holman said two years ago, that the auditor really doesn't have the power to do much without the governor's permission. Caroline says that is the reason she wants her husband to be governor.

She is telling the people no more than what the knowledgable already knows. Anyway the state highway patrol is continuing at St. James what Kit has yet to hear right at the soldiers home there and haven't been for the last two years.

Somebody will have to do the auditing there. Will it be Haskell Holman, Kit Bond, Bill Bradley, or John C. Vaughn, Thomas A. David, or James I. Spainhower? Missouri certainly needs an auditor. No doubt about that.

Released Reporter Says Papers Should Protect News Sources

BELLEVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Peter Bridge, the newsman who was jailed 21 days for refusing to answer a grand jury's questions about a story he wrote, says the news media should assert its right to protect confidential sources.

"Every news media outlet ought to poll the candidates for public office to determine where they stand on the issue of legislation providing a shield for reporters," Bridge said Wednesday during an interview at his home in this suburb of Newark.

The media should consider a politician's stand on newsman's privilege when considering endorsements.

"If they can use the power of the judiciary and the prosecutorial system to mass an attack on the free press," said the 36-year-old reporter, "then the press has the right, and the responsibility, to use every device available to insure the free flow of information."

Bridge was trying to relax at home following his release Tuesday from the Essex County Jail. But an avalanche of mail and telephone calls kept him hopping.

"The phone hasn't stopped ringing," said Bridge as he interrupted the interview for the first of many times to take calls from newspapers and television and radio stations.

Referring to the stack of mail, Bridge smiled and said, "The letters are all 100 per cent behind me. It's amazing this issue has been so quickly and well understood by people across the country."

Bridge entered jail Oct. 4, a day after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 8 to 1 not to stay his sentence to hear an appeal. He was the first newsman jailed since the Supreme Court ruled in June that newsmen must answer grand jury questions.

Bridge was cited for contempt for refusing to answer some questions posed by an Essex County grand jury about a story he wrote in the Evening News of Newark last May.

Bridge quoted a Newark Housing Authority commissioner as saying she was offered a $10,000 bribe to influence her for vote for the authority's new executive director.

Bridge was freed after a New Jersey Superior Court judge dismissed the grand jury, which was dismissed Wednesday.

Bridge says his lawyer will continue to appeal his contempt conviction. If he loses the fight in New Jersey's courts he intends to take it to the U.S. Supreme Court again.

"Just because they've voted not to give me a stay doesn't mean they've decided on the merits of the case," Bridge said.

Mrs. McGovern Back From Rest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eleanor McGovern is back home following a five-day vacation in the Virgin Islands.

The wife of Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern had been sidelined from her own active campaign because of exhaustion and an attack of abdominal pains that sent her to the hospital briefly.

She returned here Wednesday night.

IRS Turns Back $5,000 Pay Hike For Missouri Judges

ST. LOUIS — The Internal Revenue Service turned back an across the board $5,000 pay hike for Missouri judges Tuesday because it violates Federal Pay Board Rules which limit raises to 5.5 per cent.

In most cases, the 300 Missouri judges would have received increases of nearly 20 per cent. Supreme Court judges, for example, would have had their salaries raised from $26,500 to $31,500 and appellate judges from $25,000 to $30,000.

The Missouri General Assembly appropriated about $3 million in raises for the judges during the recent special session. The salary hike bill was approved during the general session which ended in April and went into effect Aug. 13.

Notices of the IRS' decision were filed with the Missouri secretary of state, the governor's office and the state treasurer, all in Jefferson City.

The IRS noted the increases were being paid without obtaining prior approval from the pay board. The courts and the governor can appeal the IRS decision.

Matthes, now chief judge of the Eighth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis, and Fred. H. Weber Jr. of Frontenac, a highway contractor.

The academy was founded in 1960 by the late Gov. James T. Blair to honor Missourians for their achievements in community, state or nation. Membership is limited to 100.

Here are the citations for the new members:

Matthes—For his exceptional record of service in the legislative, executive and judicial branches of government; and for serving as chief judge of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Globe, Star Report GOP Lead In State Poll

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Republicans led in three of five campaigns for statewide office and the race for the presidency in a central Missouri poll carried in today's St. Louis Globe-Democrat and Kansas City Star.

The poll found 550 voters questioned in 10 counties gave 54.5 per cent support to Republican gubernatorial candidate Christopher Bond and 35. 8 per cent backing to Democrat opponent Edward Dowd.

President Richd Nixon led Democratic candidate George McGovern 71.1 to 21.6 per cent.

The poll had Republicans John Danforth and William Phelps ahead in the attorney general and lieutenant governor races.

Democrats James Kirkpatrick and James Spainhower led the secretary of state and treasurer races.

counties surveyed were Camden, Cole Crawford, Miller, Moniteau, Osage, Phelps, St. Francois, Ste. Genevieve and Washington.

Cancer Society To Intensify Anti-Smoking Campaign

NEW YORK (AP) — An intensified antismoking campaign will be undertaken by the American Cancer Society with special emphasis on educational programs aimed at countering cigarette use by young people.

Dr. Luther Terry, the society's special consultant on tobacco and cancer, announced the new campaign Tuesday. He said an apparent trend toward more smoking among the young gives us great concern.

Other elements of the campaign will include new behavioral studies to find out why young people start and adults continue to smoke and a plan to establish "cessation clinics" in every community.

How Do YOU Feel About Personal Property Tax?

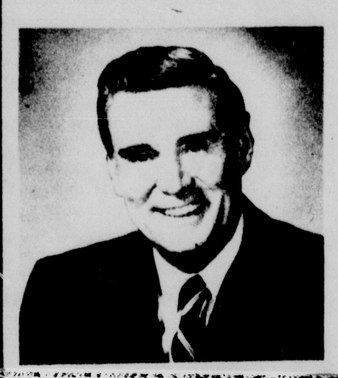
"I would abolish all personal property tax as soon as possible . . . it's a hardship on our older citizens and it can be easily replaced by Federal revenue sharing." That's how Ed Dowd feels about personal property tax! If you feel the same way, then Ed Dowd is your man for Missouri's Governor.



Sure, the people of Missouri want a change. But we all know a change for change's sake isn't the answer. The real answer lies with a mature man of Ed Dowd's unquestioned good character. The son and grandson of policemen . . . a father who understands . . . a man who didn't inherit a thing except an honest respect for the working man, a compassion for those less fortunate and a sincere willingness to help. We can trust Ed Dowd to do the right thing for all the people. Be sure November 7. Vote for Ed Dowd, Democrat for Governor.

Gallup Poll Shows McGovern Gaining

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The Gallup Poll reports that Democrat George McGovern is continuing to gain but still remains 23 percentage points behind President Nixon in their race for the presidency.

McGovern's greatest gains were among manual workers, where he narrowed Nixon's lead to only 5 points — 49 to 44 per cent, the poll reported Wednesday. In August it was 63 to 28.

The over-all standings showed Nixon with 59 per cent to 36 per cent for McGovern, one per cent for other candidates and four per cent undecided, Gallup said.

The poll, taken from Oct. 13 to 18, was based on questioning 1,220 registered voters.

August was the low point for McGovern in the Gallup poll. A survey then showed Nixon with 64 per cent to 30 per cent for McGovern and six per cent either undecided or for other candidates.

McGovern has gained in each Gallup poll since then. Gallup said the movement of manual workers back toward their traditional Democratic allegiance explained most of the Democrat's increase.

McGovern has also picked up some strength among Catholics and under-30 voters, Gallup said, but Nixon continues to lead in all major population groups except blacks and Jews.

Time is a relative matter, and always passes slowest when they're visiting.

Britian Will Reintroduce Progestogen Mini Pills; Find No Evidence Of Cancer Cause

LONDON (AP) — A British government committee says contraceptive pills, including the progestogen minipill, do not cause cancer.

After a six-year investigation, the Committee on the Safety of Medicines said in a report today:

"The evidence does not show that long-term use of oral contraceptives in their present formulation may give rise to cancer."

Drug manufacturers will be licensed to make 10 new brands of the pill, including five of the progestogen type withdrawn two years ago after American reports that it created tumors in beagle dogs.

British doctors said beagles were prone to breast cancer anyway. Britain will become the first country to reintroduce the minipills, which contain only the hormone progestogen, do not cause blood clots and have few side effects.

The committee based its report on experiments in which hundreds of rats and mice were injected with massive dosages of estrogen and progestogen to assess the cancer risk.

No Americans Dead Last Week In SE Asia

SAIGON (AP) — No Americans were reported killed in action in Indochina last week, the U.S. Command announced today, but one died of nonhostile causes, four were reported missing or captured and 14 were wounded.

It was the second week in five that the Command has reported no deaths in combat.

The South Vietnamese Command reported 2,785 enemy and 580 of its own troops killed, the highest weekly totals in a month. It said 2,075 government troops were wounded and 146 missing.

The allied commands now have listed these total casualties for the war:

American — 45,884 killed in action, 303,475 wounded in action, 10,281 dead of nonhostile causes, 1,699 missing or captured.

South Vietnamese — 157,917 killed, 417,167 wounded.

North Vitnamese and Viet Cong — 901,967 killed.

The U.S. Command also announced the deactivation of 19 Army and Air Force support units and resumed the withdrawal of an A37 jet squadron which had been delayed by enemy activity in the Saigon area. The units totaled 1,210 men.

These withdrawals lowered U.S. troop strength in Vietnam to less than 33,000 men. President Nixon has set a goal of 27,000 by Dec. 1.

Fall Foliage At Peak In South Of State Next 2 Weeks

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — If you don't have those photographs of Missouri's autumn colors, you'd better get them this weekend, says the state Department of Conservation.

The leaves, pushed along by rain and cold temperatures, are starting to fall.

The color is in its peak in northern Missouri, but the leaves should remain on the trees perhaps two more weeks in southern Missouri, department spokesmen say.

Dogwoods — the state tree — are beginning to lose their bright red leaves.

Last weekend, which had a substantial rain, was the peak of the color season in northern Missouri. The peak in southern Missouri should be the next two weekends, conservationists say.

In announcing Dr. Linn's appointment, Dr. Milford Holt, division head, said Dr. Linn probably would serve through the end of the school year, at which time a permanent director would be hired.

Dr. Linn, a member of the division since September 1967, will serve as director of the elementary and high schools on a part-time basis.

Originally from Marshfield in southwest Missouri, Dr. Linn, 42, has both elementary and secondary education experience. Making The Hero Of Watergate

ART BUCHWALD
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON — There is no doubt in my mind that the Justice Department has conducted the most thorough investigation into the Watergate bugging affair that was humanly possible. The fact that they were unable to trace any of the money in the case to any higher-ups in the Committee for the Re-election of the President was good news to all of us who hate to think that any of our political leaders would be involved in such a sordid affair.

Of course there are certain psychological factors at work in such an investigation which no one can control. When the President's own attorney general is asked to look into a scandal in the President's own party, there is always the suspicion that something was covered up.

The person I feel the most sorry for is the poor bureaucrat in the Justice Department who was called into his superior's office one day and told, "Hapless, the President of the United States of America wants you to investigate the Watergage bugging affair and all its ramifications."

"Gosh, that's a big assignment."

"The President of the United States, who happens to be President of all the people as well as the leader of the most powerful country in the world, expects you to treat this as just another case."

"He does?"

"That is correct. He has instructed the attorney general that even if his own political party is involved, and his own close personal friends are to be investigated, and his re-election is at stake, he still wants the truth to be made public at the earliest opportunity."

"Even before Nov. 7?"

"The President is more concerned in the illegal uses of wiretapping and bugging than he is in what happens on Nov. 7. You owe it to the President and the attorney general to see that every bit of evidence in this case is available to the grand jury."

"Why me?"

"He feels, as does the attorney general, that you will do the job, regardless of jeopardy to your upcoming promotion or the consequences to your future with the Justice Department.

"I might add that as your superior I am proud that the attorney general has selected someone from my staff. I have as much at stake in this thing as you do, Hapless. Whatever you turn up will personally reflect on me as well as this department. We shall all be watching you closely."

"Don't you have a Mafia case I could have instead?"

"No, Hapless. Anyone in this department can investigate a Mafia case. But there are very few men we can trust to handle an investigation this explosive. It is your duty to our President and the attorney general whom you will be working for, God willing, for the next four years, to give us the truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God."

Through carelessness or incendiarism, man is blamed for the largest portion of U.S. forest fires. During 1970, some 103,619 fires, or 89 per cent of those reported on protected lands, were caused by people, The World Almanac notes. Many millions of acres of federal, state and private lands are protected under the Federal-State Cooperative Forest Fire Control Program.

Special Breast Cancer Test Reduces Death By One-Third

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An experimental yearly screening program in New York has resulted in reduction of breast cancer death rates by one-third, says a report on a new five-year study.

However, the manual and X-ray tests reduced the mortality rate only in women over 50.

The report on breast cancer — the No. 1 fatal cancer among women — is to be presented today at the Seventh National Cancer Conference sponsored by the American Medical Society and the National Cancer Institute.

A preview of the study was presented at a Thursday news conference by Sam Shapiro, director of research and statistics of the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York.

A total of 62,000 female participants in the insurance plan were studied, he said. Half were offered the annual screening and half were not.

Within five years, 42 per cent of the unscreened women who got breast cancer died from it, Shapiro said.

Of those in the study group, only 28 per cent of those who contracted breast cancer died in five years. In addition, some women in the study group refused screening, and the death rate for those who actually underwent examination was only 17 per cent.

The diagnostic tools used in searching for early breast cancer were clinical examination, manual palpitation by a doctor and mammography, X-rays of the breast.

Shapiro couldn't explain why the screening program had little effect on women in the under-50 group.

"It may have something to do with the kinds of cancer women get before menopause and the kind they get after menopause, but we just don't know," he said.

It turned out that mammography, which is much more sensitive than the manual examination, played a large part in the reduced mortality for the over-50 women, he said.

Shapiro said that only 2 per cent of the cancers detected by mammography led to deaths in the five-year period.

The results of the five-year study, he said, justify expansion of the screening program to more women. This would be especially important for women who, because of certain aspects of their medical history, are high-risk breast cancer targets, Shapiro said.

Edie Adams Opera Debut Brings Offers

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What started as a lark might turn into an opera career for Edie Adams, more widely known as a portrayer of sexy dames and seller of cigars.

Earlier this month, the blonde actress completed four performances in the lead role of Offenbach's "LaPerichole" in a fully staged production by the Seattle Opera Company. She astonished audiences and critics alike with her full, rich soprano.

Back at her home in the Beverly Hills, Calif., Miss Adams seemed pleased with the experience — and with the offers that are beginning to come for appearances with symphony orchestras across the country.

"Are they ready for me?" she mused. "I know that I am ready, musically. But it might be too much of a shock for people to hear an operatic voice coming out of my face."

The Seattle engagement happened by accident, she said. Two years ago, she appeared on a television talk show in Seattle with Glynn Ross, "an amazing man who runs opera in Seattle and makes it pay off; the company has no deficit."

Edie mentioned that she sang opera as well as popular songs. Ross heard her sing at a Gay 90s night at the Hollywood Bowl and signed her up for "La Perichole."

"It was a noncancellable contract, and I figured I could block out the time for it," she said. "Wouldn't you know — when the date finally arrived, I had an offer to play Las Vegas for the biggest money I ever got!"

It was worth it, she remarked, to "revive a voice that had been in mothballs for 15 years."

As a youngster in New York, she had studied classical singing at the Juilliard School of Music and took private lessons from such divas as Helen Jepson, Dusolina Gianinni and Maria Kurenko. But a Broadway role as the sister Eileen in "Wonderful Town" started her career of playing "Sexy, dumb- smart blondes."

Watergate Points To the Bad in Us

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
WASHINGTON (NEA)

There's a lot of astonishment in this town over the fact that things like the Watergate bugging case and related instances of alleged political spying and sabotage aren't "grabbing" the American people in this election.

Generally, those who test the nation's views and attitudes tell us that people dismiss these matters quite cynically, saying that's "politics" and indicating they regard neither major party as being above such shenanigans.

The findings undoubtedly are accurate, as far as they go. But the story is really much larger.

While much is being made these days of popular discontent and distrust of government and politicians, only a modest part of that feeling has to do with complaints about honesty and integrity. The truth is that an inordinately large number of Americans today hold neither their public figures nor themselves to consistent standards of good behavior.

Cheating and stealing at nearly all ages and every sort of place is accepted as normal and often quite permissible. I have been in dozens of offices where it is taken for granted that if you leave anything of even minor value unguarded for a few moments, it will disappear. Not even our cheap ball-point pen is safe.

Even so, I was staggered recently to learn that, in the fair-sized office quarters of a highly respected firm where access by outsiders is limited, men's wallets were vanishing when they left their suitcoats behind while visiting another room.

Many of the transgressions can be viewed as "minor," but they are highly revealing of attitude. For instance, in most cities the fire laws forbid smoking in movie houses and other theaters. The next time you go, check around. Usually a number of people within your range are lighting up. (As a sideline on this habit, officials at the June state Democratic convention in Minnesota asked the hundreds of delegates not to smoke in the crowded convention hall, whereupon some irate woman arose to shout that nobody would stop her from smoking, that it was a violation of her constitutional rights.)

Simple things are made complex by bad behavior. Escalators are made to carry people up or down, right? Well, in this age, not necessarily. They are fun spots for the kiddies, including teen-agers, who cavort on them as if they were exhibits at Coney Island. I watched a theater manager spending nearly half his time trying to keep his escalator from being damaged by abuse.

The mere physical movement of people in public places has changed. Gathered in crowds at political or other events, they often push and shove in ways perilous to others and themselves. The mad capers which frequently accompany victory for the home baseball or football team are turning into orgies of truly vicious vandalism.

Even in small clusters, there is a curious, disorderly restlessness in people's movements. Patient, quiet waiting is out. While the doors are still closed before some event begins, you'll see people dashing about, crisscrossing each other's paths as if they were somehow alone in space, lounging on floors like exhausted athletes.

These things are minor but symptomatic. The big thing is that too many today neither practice nor believe in standards of behavior. Why should they get excited about Watergate? What the politicians do is a lot of what they, themselves do.

Divide Medical Quality

Divide a city down the middle and give one quality of medical care to one half and a different quality to the other half. Doesn't sound easy does it? People would complain.

It is possible in cities such as Texarkana, straddling the Arkansas - Texas Border. The division and differences in treatment are caused by differences in each state's medical practices.

This division has recently provided a unique demonstration of the effectiveness of measales vaccine, says Phillip J. Landrigan in the Journal of the American Medical Association. When a measles epidemic struck the Texarkana area, 633 cases of measels were counted.

Of those, 606 were on the Texas side where vaccination levels were low. In Arkansas, Dr. Landrigan reports, where immunity levels were much higher, there was no epidemic.

Pupils Have Vote Getting Ideas

MIAMI (AP) — Pupils at Shenandoah Junior High School think one way of getting voters to the polls Nov. 7 is to give out free kisses at the ballot box.

The students have other ideas for getting out the vote:

No tax refunds unless a person votes, church bells ringing every hour on election day, voting machines made to look like slot machines and entertainment at the polls and block parties with bingo and crap games.

The suggestions were part of a brainstorm session held by science teacher Morton Raisen.

Dade County Elections Supervisor Joyce Diefender said Tuesday some of the ideas have merit and are already under consideration.

Stocks Jump At Peace News From Kissinger

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices spurted upward on the stock market today on word from presidential aide Henry A. Kissinger that "peace is at hand."

On the New York Stock Exchange the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks stood at 963.04, up 1.66 points, when word of his statement was received. Thirty minutes later, at 1 p.m., it was up 6.33 to 967.71.

Trading immediately became brisk.

Brokers said the rally was spreading through the list, including cyclicals, blue-chips and glamour issues.

Advancing issues established about a 3-1 lead over declining stocks.

McGovern Versus Nixon Is Self Debate For George

DETROIT (AP) — Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern is working on a doit-yourself debate with President Nixon, the campaign rival he accuses of a "betrayal of the public trust" in the White House.

Frustrated in his effort to goad Nixon into any kind of personal debate, McGovern today planned to prepare a television program in which he answers a series of filmed Nixon statements compiled by the Democratic campaign organization.

"It will be a kind of debate," the South Dakota senator said.

He turned to that project after a campaign Wednesday concentrated on the issue of alleged corruption, wiretapping, and political sabotage—items he said would tip the election in his favor.

McGovern said his publicopinion analyst, Pat Cadell, had reported those topics are beginning to "show up now" as a significant issue, particularly among independents and Republicans.

"I think that may be one of the sleepers of the campaign," McGovern said. He campaigned to capitalize on charges—denied by the White House—that H. R. Haldeman, a top Nixon aide, shared control of a secret $700,000 campaign fund used to finance spying and sabotage against Democrats.

The account linking Haldeman and the secret political money was published by The Washington Post. McGovern claimed no independent knowledge, but he worked it hard.

"This places the whole ugly mess of corruption, espionage and sabotage, squarely in the lap of Richard Nixon," he said. McGovern talked of government corruption and political sabotage Wednesday night in a nationally televised address he called "perhaps the most important speech of the campaign."

"The men who have collected millions in secret money, who have passed out special favors, who have ordered political sabotage, who have invaded our offices in the dead of night—all of these men work for Mr. Nixon ...," he said.

McGovern said he cannot understand why Nixon "doesn't feel some moral obligation" to tell the American people what has really happened. And, as he does almost daily, he challenged Nixon to face-toface debate.

McGovern's television adviser, Charles Guggenheim, assembled the Nixon tapes and film clips for the quasi-debate.

McGovern said he did not know when the program would be shown.

The format had McGovern responding extemporaneously to Nixon's statements on the war, the economy and other issues. McGovern said the Nixon films were chosen in an effort to fairly represent the President's positions. "We leaned over backwards not to pick things that make him look bad," he said.

Bulldogs Can Play Spoiler

For the Sikeston Bulldogs and Coach Pete Cirrintano, IT is finally over. IT was their confrontation with perhaps the state's finest eleven, the Cape Girardeau Tigers. The Dogs came out of that contest with a 35-6 setback, but the inexperienced Dogs played well and were simply outclassed.

The Bulldogs have Coach Paul Webber of the Jackson Indians a bit worried. "Our scout told us they gave Cape perhaps the best game they played all year," Webber said. He then noted that the Dogs are a strong defensive team, and have some offensive firepower as well, in the form of quarterback Bill Colwick and his favorite receiver, Glen Guttenfelder.

The Cape defense held these two down last week, limiting Guttenfelder to just four catches and Colwick to just nine completions in 25 tries. The Cape front four harassed Colwick all night. Although he was dropped just twice, he was forced to throw early many times and the passing game was stopped.

However, that is all water under the bridge and Sikeston this week faces another fine team. Jackson is 6-1 so far with an outside shot at the state playoffs at the end of the season. "We cannot afford another loss," Webber related. Jackson's only loss was to the Cape powerhouse, 49-6.

The Cape offense is run by promising junior quarterback Mark Jones. Jackson runs the wishbone attack and Jones is a perfect person for the job. The 175-pounder is a fast runner with a rifle arm. His passing is a bit erratic, but he is gaining polish fast.

Joining Jones in the backfield is one of the area's top runners. Shadowed only by the fantastic Paul Schermann of Cape in the conference scoring race is little Loren Sides. Sides, another junior, is a quick, shifty runner who is extremely hard to bring down. The other two running backs in the wishbone formation are fullback Mike Litzelfelner and tailback Ted Leimer. Litzelfelner, a 165-pound senior, does most of the heavy work in the Indian offense. Leimer, a sprinter- type, joins Sides in making the wide game go.

Two other standouts perform for the Indians. One of the area's top ends is Terry Langston. Langston is the primary receiver when Jackson is forced to throw long. The senior split end is fast with very fine hands, and his total catches is low only because Jackson's running game is averaging over 280 yards per game.

Sikeston needs to get the offense moving again, after being held to just 127 yards last week against Cape. They won't find the Jackson defense obliging, however. The defensive pursuit, led by linebacker Lawrence Swan, is fabulous. Only Cape has been able to score more than once on the Indians, while three opponents have been shut out.

By comparison, the Indians' average point yield is just less than 10 points per game, while Sikeston's defense is allowing 21.1 per contest.

Missing from the contest will be senior linebacker Roy Yarber. Yarber will be replaced by sophomore Charles Scott in the contest. The Dogs will miss their defensive leader, but they will miss him more on offense. The 190-pounder lended much needed bulk to the offensive line.

The entire contest seems to hinge on Sikeston's offensive line. If the blockers do their job and hold the Indians, front five out, Colwick and Guttenfelder could do a job on Jackson. If the holes are there, Smith and Bean could help Sikeston move the ball. If they give Colwick protection, he will have time to spot secondary receivers such as Rick Eisenbach and John Farris.

A lot of ifs are involved, especially with the absence of Yarber. However, the big worry is off the team's mind, and the Bulldogs can now settle down and play their brand of football. This game should tell Sikeston fans a lot about their team's heart, if they don't already know.

Indians Face Tigers

Southeast Missouri's leading girdiron scorer, Paul Schermann, will try his skills against the Kennett Indians tonight at Houck Stadium when the Cape Girardeau Central Tigers play their eighth game of the season.

The hefty Bengal back has crossed the goal line 19 times and accounted for two extra- point conversions for 116 points through seven undefeated games this season.

His nearest rival for the individual scoring title, Danny Holder, also has led his Illmo— Scott City team to an undefeated season so far this campaign and has crossed the goal line 15 times and accounted for two extra points for 92 tallies to lead Bootheel Division scoring.

Randy Williams moved into the Southern Division scoring lead last week with a TD. Williams has scored eight touchdowns for 48 points, while Bobby Arnold of Malden has scored seven Tds and three extra points for 45. Randy Gardner, the leader most of the season, has failed to score in the past two games and dropped to third with seven TDS for 42 points.

Eight games are scheduled Friday night and one Saturday to end the eighth week of the area high school football schedule.

Young. Decisive. Daring.

Our "Geometrics" Striped Suit from The Escadrille Collection by Hart Schaffner & Marx

Different. For the young minded man who wants to be a cut above the crowd, but tastefully so because it's tailored by none other than Hart Schaffner & Marx.

Stripes of a different stripe, made up of tiny "geometric" patterns in pure wool cheviot, in fall-favored colorings.

Styling that's different. A wide span of lapels accentuating the youthfully slim waist. "Framed" patch pockets, importantly large, with deep inlaid flaps. A center vent slashed dramatically high.

Decidely different. For the man who wouldn't have it any other way.

Blackwell Backs Dowd

HILLSBORO, Mo. (AP) — State Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, who was an unsuccessful candidate during the Democratic gubernatorial primary in August, endorsed Tuesday the candidacy of Edward L. Dowd, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate.

"My endorsement of Ed Dowd is not based on partisan politics," Blackwell said in a written statement.

"My judgement is based upon a comparison of both men as to sincerity, integrity, honest and forthrightness, as well as outlook on government and ability to govern," Blackwell said.

Dowd is opposed by the Republican candidate Christopher "Kit" Bond, Missouri state auditor.

Washington Report | By Senator Symington

WASHINGTON — At the close of the second session of the 92nd Congress, a $5.4 billion Social Security and welfare bill was sent to the White House for final approval.

This mammoth bill, passed after long debate, when signed by the President, will make some significant changes and additions to Social Security and welfare programs of importance to many Missourians and millions of Americans throughout the country.

WIDOW'S BENEFITS. Effective Jan. 1, social security benefits for widows or dependent widowers will be raised from 82.5 per cent to 100 per cent of the deceased spouse's Social Security entitlement.

MEDICARE. Starting July 1, 1973, medicare will be expanded to cover an estimated 1.7 million persons who have been entitled to social security disability benefits for not less than 24 consecutive months. Those covered by this provision include disabled workers at any age, disabled widows and disabled dependent widowers between ages 50 and 65, and disabled recipients of railroad retirement [illegible] covered are persons 18 years or older who have been receiving disability benefits due to a disability received before age 22.

RETIREES. Effective Jan. 1, Social Security retirees under age 72 may earn up to $2,100 a year without losing any benefits. If income is over $2,100, benefits would be reduced $1 for each $2 earned above the $2,100 ceiling. Under present law, $1,600 is the ceiling on outside income before benefits are reduced, and benefits are reduced by $1 for each $2 of earnings between $1,680 and $2,880 and $1 for each $1 above $2,880. This change will enable 1.2 million Social Security recipients to receive higher benefit payments, and 450,000 persons will receive benefits for the first time.

For those citizens over 72, benefits will not be reduced because of income, regardless of the amount.

For future Social Security retirees, a one percent increase would be added to benefits each year retirement is delayed beyond age 65.

AGED, BLIND, DISABLED. Effective January 1, a federal program will replace the various state welfare programs in aid to impoverished aged, blind and disabled persons.

Those now receiveing $20 or more in social security or other supplement payments will receive a minimum $130 in aged, blind and disabled monthly benefits without reducing other basic assistance. Earned income of up to $65 a month, and half of earnings above $65, would not reduce the amount a person receives in aged, blind, and disabled assistance. This provision is designed to allow aged, blind and disabled who can work to use their abilities and still receive highest benefits possible.

Washington Completes Air Force Training

DENVER — Airman Lindsey Washington, son of Mrs. Linda Washington of Lilbourn, Mo., has graduated at Lowry AFB, Colo., from the U.S. Air Force supply inventory specialist course conducted by the Air Training Command.

The airman, trained to inventory supplies by use of electronic data processing machines, is being assigned to McClellan AFB, Calif., for duty with a unit of the Air Force Logistics Command which provides supplies and equipment for USAF units.

Airman Washington is a 1971 graduate of Lilbourn High School.

Earl Braswell

From very early times there have been superstitions about precious stones. Long ago, some stones were supposed to make anyone who wore them strong and brave. Others were supposed to protect their wearers from fire and lightning. Still others were supposed to bring good health and good fortunes. The idea of birthstones came from these superstitions. Each month was given a stone. Wearing this stone, people thought, would bring good fortune to anyone whose birthday was in the month. Not many people still have the old idea that precious stones can help or harm them. But many people do enjoy wearing their birthstones.

Many people still adhere to the old idea there's nothing that can be done about their tap water. They haven't heard about Refined Water, the product that obsoletes tap water by filtering, refining and softening. For a home demonstration call

Community Has Great Security; 1,400 Policemen Live There

SIMI, Calif. (AP)—There are only 34 working policemen in this Los Angeles suburb of 67,000, but there's plenty of sparetime protection. An estimated 1,400 law officers live here.

The officers say Simi's popularity is mostly a natural fluke, as when engineers, teachers or executives wind up in the same neighborhood.

"It's just a very nice area," says spokesman Sgt. Robert Sojka, a member of the city's police force. Apparently word got around of the new housing developments that younger, married officers could afford.

At any rate, Sojka says, "We have 1,400 families who are more or less in tune with the policeman's problems ... Our crime rate is rather low."

Barely on the map 10 years ago, the booming Ventura County community 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles didn't even get a full-time police force until about a year ago. Then the department came into being overnight, drawing officers from all over the state.

The new department, with an average age of about 35, stresses community relations, modern police technology and is looking for its first women patrol officer.

An estimated 1,000 of the officers who make their home here are members of the 5,000-member Los Angeles Police Department, officials said. The other 400 are from the Los Angeles County sheriff's office, the California Highway Patrol and the Ventura County sheriff's office.

The seven-year-itch is what you scratch to get up the cash for that limousine you can't afford.

Whats The Law?

The Case Of The Reluctant Patient

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Laid up in a hospital, middle- aged Clara was absolutely convinced that she was dying notwithstanding the fact that she was still breathing easily and her doctors were still smiling pleasantly. Her doctors, in fact, were so satisfied with her complete recovery from a relatively minor operation that they finally suggested that she pack up her imaginary infirmities and go home. She refused, insisting that death was probably only minutes away, and the hospital, in need of Clara's bed, took the matter to court. The hospital demanded Clara's immediate ouster on the grounds that she was a trespasser.

"I'm no trespasser," protested Clara. "Having been admitted, I'm in the hospital with the hospital's permission. I can't just be thrown out. Neither the law nor my delicate condition can allow it."

"We don't run a convalescent home," was the answer. "While Clara, like oleomargerine, may have seen butter days, that's no reason for her to stay in the hospital. And we want her out whether she was admitted with our permission or not.'.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order reluctant Clara to leave the hospital as a trespasser?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that when a patient in a private hospital refuses to leave when requested to do so, the patient becomes a trespasser. While a person may enter the property of another with permission, noted the judge in effect, if the permission is withdrawn, he becomes a trespasser by remaining.

TV Series Questions Police About Police Shows On The Tube

By JAY SHARBUTT
Ap Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP)— At least 22 new and used shows involving police currently are at large on television. They range from "Highway Patrol" to "Mod Squad" and use up a lot of blanks.

What do real- life police think of the shows? Nobody really has asked them. So one of the shows- "Police Surgeon" did the asking.

It occurred last July during a convention of the International Conference of Police Associations in Las Vegas, Nev. The show's staff gave the gendarmes a nine-point questionnaire.

The basic idea was to get in some drumbeating for "Surgeon," which is filmed in Toronto and stars Sam Groom.

But the poll, as it turns out, actually culled some interesting police views about television's man behind the badge and society's general attitude toward policeman.

About 200 conventioneers answered the "Surgeon" query. Only 15 responses were made available by the show's staff, but they seem to offer a fairly representative slice of current police opinion.

Nearly all the replies asked that shows about police try to depict law officers as human, subject to the same desires and frailties as the people they protect.

There was a predictably mixed response to the question, "How do you feel about the depiction of police and police work in television?"

One said it had been "tremendously upgraded" this year, another called it "Excellent." The remainder either siad it was fairly good or tended to overly glamorize police work without showing the long hours of routine that are a cop's life.

"Adam— 12 type programs depict about two months police work in 30 minutes," said a San Francisco officer, Michael S. Hebel. "These programs, if they depicted reality, would require a force of supermen."

"Police on TV get involved in too many shootouts," said D. Brent Mitchell, a Las Vegas patrolman who said only "Dragnet" and "Adam— 12" approach what actually goes on in police work.

He complained that television cops never make reports or get tied up in court and that "the very technical aspects— involving probable cause, landmark cases, search and seizure— are never shown being used by the officer making arrests in the field."

One of the key questions in the "Surgeon" poll didn't concern television. It asked the real cops which percentage of the public they felt was most sympathetic to the policeman and his problems.

The majority, said half of the 15 whose answers were made public.

"One hundred and five per cent if they need help," was the wry answer of detecitve Kenneth Johnson of the St. Paul, Minn., police force. The rest declined to estimate in percentages.

Researchers Make Polution Proof Plants

Agricultural scientists can't prevent pollution, but they can develop plants which will tolerate it. In some estimates, air pollutionis blamed for 250 to 500 million dollars in plant losses every year in this country.

Because of this, researchers have directed toward finding pollution - resistant plant stocks which can be used by plant breeders. An example is a recently - released strain of alfalfa which is resistant to ozone. This is needed because some current alfalfa varieties shrivel and die or are severely stunted in the presence of today's concentrations of atmospheric ozone.

The Prayer from the Upper Room

PRAYER: Our Father, as we live day by day, may we keep in mind the words of our Lord, "As ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

New Analysis

Little of Racism In Wallace Vote

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)

Research now suggests Governor George Wallace's showing at the polls has wider implications than some political scientists have been willing to think about.

Some of these studies indicate:

● The role of antiblack attitudes in the selection of Wallace has been exaggerated beyond proper proportions. Speaking more generally, the influence of racial prejudice on electoral decisions has been overemphasized. Seymour M. Lipset, of Harvard University and Earl Raab report that "over half of the Wallace supporters are not willing to say that the progress of Negroes has been 'too fast.'" J. Michael Ross of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Thomas F. Pettigrew and Reeve D. Vanneman, of Harvard, making a special study of the northern voter, report that those with strong racial feelings were only slightly (10 per cent) more likely to give Wallace a high rating. Furthermore, polls have indicated that the net gain for Wallace does not indicate that widespread "defections" of Democrats and Independents in the urban North can be specifically attributed to racially motivated discontent with federal integration policies under Democratic administrations.

Curiously, Ross, Pettigrew and Vanneman say their analysis of the opinion polls suggests to them that racially discontented voters prefer Richard Nixon over Wallace, and that this pattern becomes stronger at higher educational levels.

● Wallace's appeal extends much further into the middle class than predicted, though stress by many writers on the low educational level of many Wallace supporters has obscured that fact.

Actually, Ross, Pettigrew and Vanneman report that the Wallace phenomenon "as a dynamic process tends to find new support among the more active participants from the middle of the class hierarchy rather than (among) its most disadvantaged and apathetic members."

● Wallace's support has been heavily dependent on a specific issue — the problem of order in an urban society. Richard M. Scammon and Ben I. Wattenburg, in describing the Wallace phenomenon, claim that the "social issue" has replaced traditional economic concerns and voters are now primarily influenced by fear and anxiety about the deteriorating fabric of American society, as demonstrated in urban riots, campus unrest, and drugs.

Some researchers seem to suggest that a part of the Wallace vote at least is a rearguard action led by groups who seek to stem the direction of change through political means.

● The size of the Wallace vote in the under-30 generation was surprisingly high.

● Surveys in the north indicate men generally are more disposed toward Wallace than women.

● Wallace does not exert a mass appeal that uproots voters from their traditional loyalties.

Some research men find Wallace secures more support from Catholics than Protestants. Others come up with the opposite conclusion.

To sum up, Ross, Pettigrew and Vanneman come to the conclusion that the available data, when analyzed, does not match the conventional portrait of the Wallace supporter driven by racial hatred and political alienation.

Improved Job Picture Expected At MU-Rolla

ROLLA — A "marked improvement" for new graduates during the coming year is anticipated by Larry Nuss, director of placement and industry relations at the University of Missouri —Rolla.

He bases his predictions on a substantial increase this fall in employer requests for job interviews and in expected needs reported by key employers.

Nuss reports that the 1972 graduate fared somewhat better than his 1971 counterpart. "In spite of a reduction in the number of campus interviews, placements at graduation time were improved for the May class. Starting salary averages increased four per cent over 1971 at the bachelor's level."

The following fields showed significant increases in average monthly starting salaries, according to Nuss: metallurgical engineering ($884 vs. $820), petroleum engineering ($991 vs. $930), engineering management ($904 vs $864) and applied mathematics ($818 vs. $744). The most significant gain in starting salaries was at the Ph.D. level where monthly averages climbed from $1,007 in December, 1970, to $1,498 in May, 1972, an increase of 48 per cent.

"In some disciplines, our UMR starting salaries were practically identical with national averages for 1971 -72," Nuss adds. "Our UMR rate of gain for engineering and science starting salaries was four per cent compared to less than one per cent nationally.

The number of offers for employment rose substantically over the previous year, both on the UMR campus and nationally. Both local and national survey figures showed gains ranging from 12 per cent at the bachelor's level to 32 per cent at the master's and 44 per cent at the doctoral.

To the Editor of Sikeston Standard-

This is in regard to Rev. Dale speaking of mans need of Jesus. Granted he does, but also does the woman in the married homes. Busy washing diapers working, washing, ironing, scrimping to pay bills doing general house work also. Mows the lawn washes windows, paints, does anything and everything to make a home for her man. I am near 87 years old, blind and cripled, but still trying to make a home. Rev. Dale you remember this old saying, 'the hands that rock the cradle rules the world? Good or bad they really do. I have lived from Chesapeake Bay to Boston Harbor and worked so I believe I have seen a few homes, also I have lived on Western Coast as far south as Mexico, as far north as Canada. So, Rev. I say the woman needs Jesus also. And I thank you for taking time to read this scrawl.

Dear Editor:

Inflation is cheating the innocent old, retired and widowed people who live on returns from savings accounts, annuities and Social Security. The Resources of all of these helpless people are being shamefully and pitilessly expropriated via the shrinking [illegible] dollar.

This is all brought on by the "Spenders" in Congress who are wildly spending beyond tax income in what is known as "Deficit Financing". According to Congressman Wilbur Mills, "Deficit Spending is the sole basic cause of inflation."

We must put an end to this shameful curse of apocalyptical Government Spending.

Sincerely,

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — They haven't even finished building the new Communications complex on the University of Texas campus, and it's already starting to rust. But architects are pleased.

It's a fairly new construction process, using what's known as weathering steel. It starts out looking rather nondescript, begins to streak as the rusting starts, and within six months or a year becomes a uniform orange-brown.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Which Are Most Effective?

Seeking Alternatives to the Pill

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I donate blood to a blood bank once or twice a year. Do they check for syphilis? Should I be secure in not having a disease since I give blood? I recently broke up with a man I expected to marry as I am quite sure he's been cheating on me. I'm not promiscuous. I do get a physical about every six months. Would my doctor know through lab tests and pelvic exams that I am in good health. I'm in my 40s and am ashamed to say that I know so little about this subject. I do read about it and it scares me although I haven't any physical evidence to warrant my worries.

Dear Reader — Yes, the blook bank tests all blood it collects for syphilis. In the first few weeks of infection the tests can be negative and sometimes in individuals who have had it for several years, the tests can be negative. But with regular examinations such as you described it is most unlikely that you would have a negative test and still have syphilis.

Although a blood test is now being developed for gonorrhea, at present it is not available and the test has to be made from a culture obtained during the pelvic examination. Without the culture test the pelvic examination might be negative and the woman still could have gonorrhea.

About 80 per cent of the women who have gonorrhea have no symptoms, which is one reason that the disease has gotten out of hand and exists in epidemic proportions in this country. A new office culture test method is available now which should make it easy for practicing doctors to determine if a woman has gonorrhea or not, even if she has no symptoms and there's no good evidence of it on the physical examination. If you're worried about it, why don't you ask your doctor to test you for it.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Is there anything that can be done to remove a keloid scar. Recently I had some moles removed from my face and back and now they have healed into a keloid scar. My doctor says they are hereditary. They just look terrible.

Dear Reader — A keloid scar is an overgrowth of the scar tissue even to the point of forming masses or tumors. They more often occur before age 35 and particularly in individuals with dark skin.

If they are cut away, there is a great chance that they will just come back again, unless they are done in later years and then, with increased age, they are less likely to recur.

For this reason, most doctors who remove keloid scars like to use X-ray or other treatment over the fresh operation area, and for sometime thereafter to try to prevent a recurrence of the keloids. X-ray therapy is not very beneficial in treating an old keloid and usually must be used with new surgery.

Kissinger Says Peace At Hand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger said today "peace is at hand" in Vietnam.

Kissinger told newsmen in an hour-long briefing that most major provisions of a settlement have been agreed to, but that one more negotiating session "lasting no more than three or four days" is necessary.

In breaking American silence on the status of the peace efforts, Kissinger said the nine points outlined earlier today by North Vietnam are essentially correct.

He also said: "I want to stress that what remains to be done is the smallest part of what has already been accomplished."

The presidential adviser said the remaining details are essentially linguistic and technical but need to be settled before the United States and South Vietnam can sign a pact.

He listed what were "six or seven very concrete issues that with anything like the good will that has been shown can easily be cleared up."

He included in his examples the need from the U.S. side to specify that no move will be made to grab additional territory between the time of the cease-fire and a political settlement.

He also said there needs to be clarification on the timing of the Vietnamese settlement relative to the settlement of the conflicts in Laos and Cambodia.

Earlier, Herb Klein, the White House communications director, had said a North Vietnamese broadcast saying the United States had agreed to sign an agreement but backed off was false. At a Cleveland news conference, Klein also rejected claims the United States is stalling negotiations.

Among other problems Kissinger said that need to be finally solved are whether Washington should sign the agreement on behalf of South Vietnam.

He said this was not a serious difficulty but it is understandable that the South Vietnamese, who have suffered the most during the war and who must remain under the settlement, should want to sign their own peace treaty."

On the issue of South Vietnam, the presidential aide said there were both agreements and disagreements by Saigon with the draft agreement.

But, South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu will accept a cease-fire, Kissinger said. He added that he believed the bitter expression of opposition from the Saigon leader earlier this week to a coalition government was addressed to "a previous plan, not this version."

Kissinger said the Oct. 31 deadline for signing a final agreement was set by the North Vietnamese.

While the United States had indicated it "hoped" to draft a proposed pact by that date, it never committed itself to such a deadline, Kissinger stated.

When asked what would happen if the Oct. 31 deadline passes without a signing, Kissinger indicated his belief that negotiations would continue.

"I can't believe that when this progress has been made an arbitrary deadline" will break off the negotiations, he said.

It is up to the North Vietnamese, Kissinger said, to set the date of the concluding negotiating session. He did not say where that final session should be held, but Paris has been the site of the previous sessions.

Kissinger went over the nine points already disclosed by the North Vietnamese, listing them in the main as a cease-fire to be observed in South Vietnam in place and "at a time mutually agreed upon."

U.S. forces would be pulled out within 60 days of the signing with a total prohibition against any infiltration of forces from North Vietnam either across the demilitarized zone or from Laos or Cambodia.

Military supplies to forces in South Vietnam will be banned except for replacement on a one-to-one basis of worn-out or damaged equipment.

All prisoners, military and civilian, are to be returned parallel to the withdrawal of American forces and will be completed within 60 days of the agreement's signing.

Kissinger said North Vietnam took it upon itself to account for all prisoners and missing in action in Laos and Cambodia as well as in Vietnam. And, he said, the return of American prisoners is not conditioned on the repatriation of Vietnamese captives.

On the political side, Kissinger said the agreement guarantees the right to self-determination by South Vietnam through a future "free and democratic election under international supervision."

This, he said, means the existing authorities of the Saigon government as well as the Viet Cong regime will remain in office and those two parties will negotiate "about the timing, nature and offices for which the elections will be held."

The Kissinger account also agreed with the North Vietnamese version generally concerning a National Council of Reconciliation "to help promote and maintain the cease-fire and to supervise the election."

During the question-and-answer session Kissinger was pressed about the timing of the agreement with the U.S. presidential election less than two weeks away. He said the American domestic political situation was never part of the American negotiating strategy.

He pointed out that the United States was willing to keep secret all aspects of the negotiation and reminded reporters again that the Oct. 31 deadline was Hanoi's idea, not Washington's.

Injuries Are Fatal

One late death and two minor area traffic accidents were reported today by the highway patrol.

An accident at 11:25 a.m. on Sept. 20 at the junction of Route T, Business 67 and Highway 67 one mile south of Fredericktown has resulted in the death of Archie R. Tripp, 64, of Mill Creek.

He was transferred from Madison County Memorial Hospital in Fredericktown to St. John's Mercy Hospital in St. Louis County where he died Wednesday at 12:02 p.m.

The accident occurred when Tripp pulled out from Business 67 into the path of a tractor- trailer driven by Lenny Carlson, 32, of Palos Hills, Ill.

At 5:05 p.m. Wednesday four miles south of Fisk on Route FF, a pickup truck driven by James Gambill, 32, of Fisk backed from a driveway into a car driven by Fred Sullivan, 75, of Fisk. Juanita Sullivan, 59, a passenger, received minor injuries and was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

A car driven by Shirley Jean Hall, 19, of Hayti ran off the road and overturned early today injuring a passenger, Sharon Lacy, 18, of Hayti. She was taken to Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti with a possible concussion.

The accident occurred at 1:15 a.m. on Highway 84 six miles west of Hayti.

Police Seek Catnaper

A black and beige Siamese cat was reported stolen at 3:45 p.m. Wednesday from the yard in front of the Hayes Tidwell home at 125 W. Trotter St., according to police.

Police said a young man in a beige car pulled up in front of the Tidwell home and called the cat. When the cat came close to the car, the man grabbed it and drove off.

The cat answers to the name, "Critter."

Cafe Employe Knocked Unconscious, Robbed

MOREHOUSE — Police are searching for the man who robbed the Running Horse Cafe of about $160 early this morning after knocking an employe unconscious.

Mrs. Edna Mae Cummins of Sikeston Route One was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital for examination after she was found unconscious at the cafe by John Summers of Canalou.

Mrs. Cummins told highway patrolmen that a tall, thin man wearing dark pants, a blue shirt and a short, blue jacket walked into the cafe about 7:30 a.m. and asked for a cup of coffee.

When she said the coffee was not ready, he asked for change to buy cigarettes. Mrs. Cummins said she walked back to the cash register and heard him behind her. He then struck her on the head with his hand and reportedly sprayed something in her face. She was unconscious for about 15 minutes.

Police said they could not tell what he sprayed in her face, and Mrs. Cummins could not describe the container used.

Cpl. Melvin Moyers of the highway patrol said about $140 was taken from the cash register and $20 from Mrs. Cummins' billfold.

Mrs. Cummings said the man appeared to be in his early 40s, about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighed about 155 pounds.

Attendants at the service station next to the restaurant told police they saw no cars at the cafe at the time of the robbery.

City Marshal Slim Rodgers said he had driven by the cafe just before Mrs. Cummins opened the restaurant and saw nothing unusual. Police say the man apparently left the area on foot.

104 Prosecutors Endorse Spain

FULTON, Mo. (AP) — Callaway County Pros. Atty. Gene Hamilton today announced endorsement by 104 Missouri prosecuting attorneys and assistant prosecutors of James E. Spain, Democratic candidate for attorney general.

Hamilton, a supporter of Spain, asserted he had written letters to Missouri prosecutors asking their support for the Bloomfield attorney, who is a former Stoddard County prosecutor.

"The attorney general's office could be of much greater support to local crime fighting than it is today," Hamiltonq said. "We have examined the qualifications of both candidates and we believe Spain's exprience as a working trial attorney. . .and his knowledge of the Legislature in which he served six years clearly calls for our whole-hearted endorsement."

Hamilton said the endorsements came from all areas of the state and represented around 60 of Missouri's 114 counties. Some endorsements came from assistant prosecutors, as well as prosecutors.

"BUTLEY": THE
THEATER OF INDECISION

As usual, the 1972-73 Braodway theater season will feature a number of British imports. Among the more controversial of these is "Butley," a play written by Simon Gray, which was first staged in London last year. It is scheduled to open at the Morosco Theater in a limited engagement on Tuesday, Oct. 31.

It seems safe to say that Americans will applaud the acting of the play's star, Alan Bates, and of the predominantly English supporting cast. Beyond that, however, "Butley" raises a number of disturbing questions about the state of contemporary theater. Briefly stated, "Butley" is the story of a greying university lecturer faced with the breakdown both of his marriage and of his friendship with a fellow teacher. There are definite overtones of homosexuality, handled here much more forthrightly than in such a play as "Tea and Sympathy."

Some of the waspish repartee of the title character is very witty indeed. The audience laughs with genuine amusement. Once outside the theater, however, playgoers tend to feel let down, put off in some way. Possibly this post-curtain reaction is symptomatic of what ails modern drama. The indecisiveness and inconsequentiality of the current stage is deadening.

The London Evening Standard's critic, Milton Shuman, praised the "stark, unsentimental approach to the homosexual relationship" in "Butley." On a deeper level, though, the play remains unsatisfying. What can it tell us about the essence of human relationship? By this measure, "Butley" falls flat. The confusion of identities, symbolic of a sexually broad-minded age, spills over onto the stage. The contemporary theater has little to gain by indulging in ever more superficial titillation of an already jaded public.

BLACK MAN,
WHITE COAT

Statistics on black scientist are discouraging. Only 600 received a science Ph.D. during the last century.

The Cornell University medical college graduated almost 900 doctors during the 1960s. Two were American blacks.

Nothing is more needed than Negro doctors. In New York City, for example, there is one doctor for every 200 persons. Black neighborhoods have one for every 12,000.

Medical doctors' degrees are received by one white in 560, while only one black in 3800 gets one. Recently, though, the picture has begun to change. Of the 92 freshmen admitted to Cornell's medical school last fall, 11 were black and two Pureto Rican. Last year, 697 blacks entered medical schools, an increase of almost 50 percent.

Matching Cornell's progress is the University of Pennsylvania and its program for teaching black high school students the rudiments of lab science. Reaching the most motivated students, Penn's work-study program has trained 70 blacks.

Giving black science experience helped them win college grants. Gone are the days when science was a white only field. All 70 of the Penn students have gone on to college or technical schools.

For these students, the project was fruitful. They put their skills to use in their neighborhoods. Family and friends were proud of black students who wore white coats and mastered previously white field.

Blacks, who sharply feel the doctor bind, seem on their way to becoming the solution to their own problem.

NEW YORK (AP) — All summer long there are more things to do than there is time to do them.

But in winter it's the other way. Winter is to a grownup what a rainy day is to a child. Time hangs heavy on his hands.

All this really indicates is a lack of imagination and responsibility. There are dozens of tasks and adventures to embark upon if you just think.

How about finally doing some of those odd chores and quaint deeds you've been mulling over for years?

You might—

Should Marijuana
Be Legalized?

Sen. James Eastlend's (D.Miss.) Senate Internal Security subcommittee has just finished holding some remarkable hearsings on the worldwide narcotics traffic, but for some curious reason the media failed to give them extensive coverage. The topic of the subcommittee's probe was clearly provocative and newsworthy, while the witnesses including former Marine Gen. Lewis Walt and Dr. Olav J. Braenden, director of the United Nations Narcotics Laboratory, had a certain star quality about them.

Dr. Braenden as one of the key witnesses gave some conclusions on cannabis (the Marijuana plant) but these were given scant attention by the press. For the past six years, under instructions from the U. S.'s Division of Narcotic Drugs, he has made cannabis research a top priority.

Cannabis is the scientific name for the marijuana plant. Ordinary marijuana comes from the leaves of the plant, while hashish, nearly five times as concentrated as marijuana, is derived from the resin of the plant.

Before testifying, said Dr. Braenden, he had contacted a number of scientists in different countries who had been collaborating on various aspects of cannabis research. Dr. Braenden conversed with Prof. W. D. M. Paton of Oxford University; Dr. Ola Rafaelsen of Denmark; Prof. C. Miras of the University of Athens, and with Prof. Cornelius Salamink of the University of Utrecht in the Netherlands.

"Among scientists working in the field," Dr. Braenden told the subcommitte, "it would seem that there is general consensus that cannabis is dangerous - opinions differ, however, on the degree of the danger to the individual and to society. In my opinion, it seems that, as progressively more scientific facts are discovered about cananbis, the more one becomes aware of its potential dangers."

Dr. Braenden says there is evidence that with repeated use, cannabis tends to build up in the body tissue. Moreover, there may be considerable impairment in driving ability after oral ingestion of cannabis, and rat experiments have resulted in a very high percentage of birth abnormalities.

Even more alarming, Dr. Braenden testified that Dr. A. M. Campbell and his colleagues of the Bristol Royal United Hospital have found "significant evidence of cerebral atrophy in young smokers."

In his own investigation nto the subject of marijuana, Gen. Walt said he disagreed sharply with the government's commission on marijuana -- the Shafer Commission -- which, in effect, recommended the legalization of cannabis for personal use and for distribution in small quantities. Gen. Walt said he agrees with the commission's belief that youthful mairjuana smokers should not be sentenced to several years in prison, but he still favors fining smokers by way of "underscoring the point that marijuana smoking does damage to society."

Among the many officials of foreign governments with whom Walt and his staff discussed the Shafer report, not a single one "shared the tolerant attitude of the Shafer Commission toward cannabis. In Jaman, France and other countries we were told that the Shafer Commission report has caused consternation on the ranks of those concerned with problems of drug control, and that it seriously undercut their efforts to combat the growing use of marijuana in their own countries."

Walt said he was surprised particularly that the Shafer team, in the course of its foreign travels, did not once take time to check in with Dr. Braenden whose U. N. office is a clearing house for some 30 laboratories working on heroin and marijuana research.

Thus, said Walt, it is difficult to accept the Shafer report as "gospel." The retired Marine general suggested that far more research should be made into the effects of cannabis before we embark on the radical course of legalizing marijuana as advocated by the Shafer Commission.

AN IMPORTANT

In spite of assumptions to the contrary, consumerism is not the sole property of the professional consumer protector. Industry has its consumerists – representatives of companies involved in various consumer education programs – who probably know a lot more about the nuts and bolts of consumer protection than some of the roving bands of crusaders. Much of their work is done beyond the glow of the limelight.

One such person is Mrs. Elaine Pitts, an executive of a large trading stamp firm. In an interview with a correspondent of the Albany, New York, Times - Union, she talked about the myriad problems confronting the housewife today. She observed that, "The consumer is probably faced with more complex decisions now than ever before. There's a real need for consumer information and education and, although progress is slow ... largely because of the many thousands of items on supermarket shelves alone ... we are making headway. Responsible business is recognizing this and trying to respond to the need." She noted her own company's efforts in this direction. Its activities include the developing of consumer programs for clubs, organizations, teachers and educators throughout the country. She stressed the ever-increasing need to learn how to judge and evaluate. This means reading labels these days "... even though time is all too often the very thing she (the consumer) has the least of."

Mrs. Pitts' philosophy of consumerism prefers the education of consumers to the adoption of police- state type controls that rest on the inference that all consumers are fools. It is an important distinction.

Why do you suppose the Globe Democrat features Governor Hearnes's use of the state plane but says nothing about President Nixon making all of his trips in Air Force No. 1, wherever he is going? Now if the President can travel all the time in a plane paid for both in original cost and in operation by we the people, why can't the Governor of Missouri do the same thing? Way back in 1918 we had permission to fly a plane to Post Field, Fort Sill, to Lawrence, Kansas, to see the Missouri- Kansas football game. There were three officers with a K.U.background who were going to ride with us. But came the day, and it was Thanksgiving Day, the wind was blowing 30 miles an hour and we couldn't make the trip. Now if we had gotten away, the taxpayers would have had to pay for the cost of the flight. But we were not in politics so it wouldn't have caused any sensation.

WAR ON CRIME

Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy of New York City has completed his third year in office. He finds the crime problem as tough, maybe toughter, than it was three years ago. In an interview on a national television program, Commissioner Murphy said that crime has many faces today. Some of it is organized. Some of it is street crime. There is official corruption involved. Half of the offenders, he estimated, are using narcotics.

Mr. Murphy also dealt with the problems of the court. He declared that the court dockets in his city were so overloaded that judges have to accept guilty pleas in many cases and let defendants off with light sentences. There simply is not time enough to have contested cases. This seems to be the unhappy situation in all cities now. Defendants who are guilty and ought to be kept off the streets are released in short order and continue to play their trade of criminal activity.

The commissioner is opposed to a federal police force. He is correct. But he thinks that the states should apply more muscle in the control of crime. He is also correct in this belief. More stringent state laws on bail bonds and closer relationships of state police agencies would help curtail criminal activities. Most states have fine police intelligence agencies. Detectives rely on information to break criminal cases. Modern communications make this exchange possible.

Commissioner Murphy has done a good job in New York with a situation that was almost out of hand. His frank estimate of the crime problem we face nationally should be appreciated and his words of wisdom absorbed. Let local, state and county law enforcement agencies cooperate more closely for maximum results. We can still whip the problem of crime.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — A confidential communication between two top Pennsylvania officials contains evidence that Rep. Dan Flood'd office has been deeply involved in fixing state contracts in exchange for campaign funds.

Flood, one of the most powerful Democrats in Congress, represents the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania where fires reging through abandones mine sites have created an air pollution crisis.

With money raised by special bond issue, the state has been paying contractors to put out the fires. Alleged irregularities, however, caused an investigation by State Auditor General Robert Casey.

Casey passed on his findings to Pennsylvania Attorney General Shane Creamer in a series of letters marked "Personal and Confidential. One of the letters deals with a contract awarded to a firm headed by Jack Dixon, a candidate for the Pennsylvania legislature this year.

"A confidential informant advised me," wrote Casey, "that he had reliable information to the effect that pressure was brought to bear on principals in the firm of Kaminski Brothers of Avoca, Pennsylvania, not to submit a bid on this contract.

"Specifically, he stated that early in November (1970) the Kaminskis were called by Stephen Elko, administrative assistant to Congressman Daniel Flood, to attend a meeting in the Congressman's Wilkes Barre office.

"At this meeting Elko allegedly said, 'We don't want you to bid this job. This is the way we get campaign funds. There will be other jobs.'

"On two occasions during October (1970), according to the informant, Jack Dixon came to the Kaminski plant in Avoca and told them that they should withdraw and that this was a way to get campaign funds."

The letter also cited a report from the same informant that the Kaminskis were visited by an equipment supplier in the area who urged them not to bid on the contract and "impressed upon Kaminski 'how powerful Dan Flood is.'"

Flood's aide, Elko, denied any wrongdoing and said he could not remember any meeting with the Kaminski brothers in Wilkes Barre. Flood also denied intervening in the state contracts. "I wouldn't go near any state contract with a ten-foot pole," he said. Our efforts to reach Dixon failed.

The Casey findings are now under investigation by the state crime commission.

Poly-Clean' cleaned out

The federal government's purchasing agency, which spends billions in goods, services and construction, has quietly acted to make as sure as possible that not a penny goes to Mafia-infested contractors.

General Services Administrator Arthur Sampson is amending his regulations after learning to his astonishment that the federal government's law-abiding agencies were cleaning their floors with a detergent peddled by a member of the late Vito Genovese's crime family.

The GSA had innocently contracted for at least $51,000 worth of Poly-Clean, produced by GNR Corporation in a rundown Palmer, Mass., plant. Its distributor was All Purpose Chemical Co. of East Orange, N. J.

All Purpose, as it turns out, was secretly owned by well-known Mafia Hoodlum Thoman "Timmy Murphy" Pecora, according to testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee. GNR also reputedly had Mafia links.

Thus, ironically, the very federal agencies trying to clean up organized crime were themselves being cleaned up by a heavy duty Mafia-linked product. The situation was clearly intolerable for a law and order administration like the present one.

GSA, therefore, as soon as it learned of Poly—Clean's dirty ties, put a memo in its files to remind itself to refer any future Poly-Clean bids to the Justice Department's organized crime section.

Sampson has also sent out instructions and begun formally stengthening GSA regulations and so that all bids from firms linked to the underworld will be sent to Justice for review. Those genuinely infested with syndicate members will be denied contracts under Sampson's proposed regulations.

Actually, GSA has been informally turning down Majia bids for years when they knew of the Mafia connection. Sampson himself, when he was GSA's Public Building Service Commissioner, managed to stop a government rental contract on the West Coast from going to a Mafia-linked landlord.

Footnote: David Weiner, president of GNR, contended that his company has no Mafia links whatever. "Poly-Clean is a good product," he told us from Palmer, Mass., "and it's made by a good, clean company."

Confidential Crisis: How Billion-Dollar Soviet Grain Deal Was Salvaged

NEW YORK — There were some recent unreported dramatic hours when it appeared that the billion-dollar grain deal would go down waterfront drains; that the Soviet people might go hungry after all; that with a new confrontation replacing consultation cataclysms might be triggered all along the line from this vast harbor to Hanoi with an intermediate stop in Moscow.

It all began in the catacombs of the Commerce and State Departments. At first none of it got through to President Nixon.

How Richard Nixon reacted, how he moved and operated when he learned that his intricate plans were about to be howitzered by some very clever Russian state traders and some U. S. government officials purring over Soviet flattery is a profile of Richard Nixon's era in the Oval Room.

This saga began Sept. 18 when Jesse Calhoon, leader of the Marine Engineers Union, one of Mr. Nixon's earliest labor supporters, was telephoned by some American shipowners. They told him they had just been briefed by the State Dept. They told Calhoon they had been told American freighters would carry as much newly sold grain to Soviet ports as the U. S. S. R. merchant vessels carried -- and that could be nothing.

This meant that if the Russians decided not to use their own craft, but chartered the less expensive low-wage "third world" or other foreign flag ships, American shippers would get none of the business, American seamen, members of Paul Hall's Seafarers and Joe Curran's National Maritime Union, would not get "bread," nor would ship masters, radio shack operators, marine engineers, et al.

Calhoon elphoned Andy Gibson, then Assistant Secretary for International Affairs in the Commerce Dept., and with waterfront argot and anger, asked how come? Gibson, whom Calhoon later called a liar, said the report wasn't true.

The only "commitment" the naive Gibson had from the Russians was an official letter stating they "intended" to use one third American ships to haul the life-giving grain to the U.S.S.R. No commitment -- not from the Russians, nor the State Dept., nor the Commerce Dept. people.

On Sept 21, American labor and ship management officials met in Washington with the Maritime Administrator who admitted there were no commitments from the Soviets.

"Every maritime union got mad," explained Calhoon later. "And we let them know . . . if that was going to be the name of the game there was going to be no cargo moved to Russia."

And there would not have been. Period. Just like that because among those angered were the Longshoremen's Ted Gleason, without whose men nothing can move from Great Lakes, Atlantic and Gulf ports. And without Paul Hall's Seafarers very little can be shipped out -- even if the dockers load the wheat. By this time the international trade agreement called for Russian pruchase of some 16 million tons worth about a billion dollars, say the maritime people.

Now the scene shifts to the Connally ranch in Texas. This is Sept. 22. It had been a long day for Dick Nixon. He looked beat that night. He had been on the receiving line for almost two house. Then he spent an hour and a half moving from table to table.

He made every table. He spoke. He listened. At one of the tables sat Jesse Calhoon who briefed the President on the problem. The President said he'd look into it. No notes. And then on to the next table.

The next day Calhoon was telephoned by a deputy assistant to the President, Henry Cashen, a specialist in labor and aide to Charles "Chuck" Colson, Mr. Nixon's very special special counsel, head of the White House's daily-meeting "Counterattack" group. Calhoon was told to meet Mr. Nixon on Sept. 26, here at the Waldorf in John Ehrlichman's suite.

At about 7:30 p.m. that evening in walked the President. Calhoon said, in effect, that the maritime leaders were ready to blow up a storm. They felt they had been crossed by both the Russians and "the bureaucrats."

"I know the agreement that was made with the maritime unions," said the President, "and I fully intend to live up to that agreement. You are going to get your full one-third share and it is going to be mandatory, and it is going to be in the bilateral shipping agreement between the U. S. and Russia."

On Oct. 14 the United States and the Soviet Union signed a very specific maritime pact. The intentions of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics were not taken for granted. In hard language the agreement calls for American and Soviet freighters each to carry one-third of the American grain. If the Russians don't want to carry a third in their own craft that's their business. Now wheat for the bread of Russia will definitely mean "bread" for the homes of American seamen.

So, the American maritime unions will deliver wheat to the Russians people -- and politically to Richard Nixon. If politics is the art of the possible, it also is the art of the quid proquo.

Nixon To Act On Bills From 92nd Congress; Forcasts Vetoes For Many

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be veto day at the White House today as President Nixon announces decisions on a big batch of bills sent to him by the 92nd Congress.

The White House promised action by midmorning on a number of unspecified bills and said Nixon's top domestic adviser, John Ehrlichman, would be on hand to explain Nixon's views.

The President has forecast "a number of vetoes" this week as he continues to review 115 bills passed in the final days before Congress adjourned.

Nixon alleges that Congress sent him measures calling for spending "far in excess of what we can afford" and he said he would use every weapon at his command to keep government spending as close as possible to $250 billion this fiscal year.

Congress rejected his demand for legislation setting a spending ceiling at that level and giving him sole authority to determine where cuts should be made.

Ehrlichman and budget director Caspar W. Weinberger have said a prime target for a veto is the bill appropriating $30.5 billion for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

Nixon first vetoed the bill last August when he labeled it irresponsible spending. The veto was upheld in Congress which then passed a new version retaining the same total figure.

But the new bill gives Nixon discretionary authority to cut 13 per cent of the total, reducing it to $29.3 billion. It also sets the $2.5-billion ceiling Nixon wanted on the social-services program which now provides open-ended grants to states.

The $30.5-billion total is $1.77 billion more than Nixon wanted.

Also on the possible-veto list is the Social Security-welfare bill. It passed Congress Oct. 17 but took over a week to go through procedural formalities and only arrived at the White House Wednesday. So the President has until Nov. 6, the day before the election, to act on it.

This bill provides a variety of increases in Social Security benefits and welfare payments plus a boost in payroll taxes to finance them. Welfare reform—Nixon's proposal as well as several compromise versions—was knocked out shortly before passage.

Missouri Supreme Court Rules For Lawyer's Case

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state Supreme Court has upheld a defense lawyer's contention that he can't be forced to represent an indigent client unless he is assured of being paid.

In an order issued Wednesday, the court gave Callaway County Circuit Judge Frank Conley until Nov. 3 to reappoint Granville Collins of Fulton under the public defender law and with reasonable compensation, or to appoint someone else.

Reappointment of Collins in the murder trial, the court order said, would have Collins serving in place of a circuit defender who has not yet been approved under the public defender law.

Collins asked Sept. 5 to be relieved as counsel for Solomon Williams because he was not assured of payment. The legislature set up a public defender system but did not fund it.

However, in September, $1 million was appropriaed for the public defender bill in a special legislative session.

Last year the court ruled that lawyers could not be required to represent indigent defendants after Sept. 1 without being paid.

Under the defender law, a judge can pay an attorney a reasonable fee in cases where the court has no salaried public defender.

Collins was the Callaway County public defender for several years until a Ford Foundation grant expired. Since then, the county has had no salaried public defender.

Williams and two other men were charged more than a year ago with beating to death a Fulton State Hospital doctor with a mop handle.

TWO PEOPLE WERE injured in a two- car accident Wednesday caused by a dog in the street. The accident occurred shortly after 5 p.m. in front of War Drum on East Malone, when a car driven by Peggy Lou Pearson, 306 Jarvis, struck a large German shepherd. Police say her car spun around and was struck in the side by a pickup truck driven by Morris Green of Route two. The Pearson woman was treated at Missouri Delta Community Hospital for scratches on the face, shoulder and thigh. Green was treated for bruises. The dog was not injured and left the scene.

British Pound Drops To New Low

LONDON (AP) — The British pound fell to a record low today for the third straight day, unsettling world money markets and affecting other leading currencies including the French franc and the U.S. dollar.

By early afternoon the pound was down to $2.3463 here, a drop of nearly a cent and a half from the close of $2.36 Wednesday night and a new all-time low.

One reason for the steep decline of the pound of more than five cents against the U.S. dollar this week has been a forecast by West German economic institutes that eventually the pound may be revalued at $2.25.

The British treasury issued a statement today claiming the German report was "without foundation."

Although the dollar showed some strength in London and Paris, it was generally weaker throughout the rest of Europe.

The pound has been falling because in the view of financial markets it was overvalued, due primarily to Britain's rate of inflation, the highest in Western Europe, and other economic troubles.

Once the pound had sharply declined however, lowering its exchange rates against other currencies, it left the weaker ones among them exposed as the next targets for reduced exchange rates, the French franc prominent among them.

Ann Landers

Straight Dope From A Former Addict

Dear Ann Landers: If had read the letter I am about to write a year ago I would have laughed it off-- but I hope and pray that every person who is on pot and considering experimenting with harder drugs for curiosity or kicks will read this and learn something.

As far back as I can remember I have been aware of mankind's problems and wished I could help alleviate human suffering. I pondered the meaning of truth and sought answers to "Who am I? Where am I going? Is life worth the struggle?"

I heard drugs could give added insight and new dimensions so I decided to experiment. Grass just laid me back and wasted my time, so I went to peyote and mescaline. Next I tried acid, and finally Speed. I took about ten trips before I overdosed and slipped into a cavernous hell. For ten hours I tried desperately to hang on to life. I prayed to a God I didn't believe in to keep me sane until the drugs wore off. I went as high and as low as a person can go and still not come back. I found not truth but fear; not comfort, but agony; not light, but darkness. When the dawn broke I was so grateful to be alive I swore off drugs forever.

Yes, I was through with drugs, but drugs were not through with me. Four months later the flashbacks began. Walls began to move, rockets began to go off in my head. Dizzy spells, weird noises, sleepless nights, terrifying images, maniacal laughter cut deep into my skull. My heart wouldn't stop pounding. I was swimming in sweat-- helpless against these horrible sensations.

Before I took drugs I knew I had problems, but at least I knew I was sane. Now my problems were overwhelming me and I wasn't sure of anything.

Please don't worry about me, Ann, I'm getting professional help and crawling back, an inch at a time. I'm going to make it, but it's a slow process. I just hope my letter connects with some cat who is where I was a year ago. If such a person is reading this now, please don't say, "You're a nut. It won't get me. I can handle it. It's all in your head." What do you have but your head, man? Your head is a masterpiece of electro-chemical engineering. Don't mess it up with drugs like I did.--- Peace In The Pacific Northwest

Dear Friend: I can add nothing except my thanks for a moving report from someone who's been there. God bless and write again.

And here's another shameless plug for my booklet "Straight Dope On Drugs." Send $1 to Ann Landers, Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654. Enclose a long, self- addressed envelope with 16c worth of stamps. No preaching. Just facts. The proceeds of this sale are going to Synanon in San Francisco.

DearAnn Landers: Last week my boss dismissed a fellow worker. Now I am doing her work as well as mine. He made a big deal out of the raise I'd be getting. Today my check came. The raise is $2 a week. What do you think?--- Morristown Lackey

Dear Morris: If you are able to handle your work as well as the work of a colleague, you didn't have enough to do-- or the recently departed co-worker wasn't doing much, which may be why she is no longer there.

Your letter reminds me of some interesting statistics. The United States Department of Labor announced that 90 million people in this country are employed. It didn't say how many were working.

Ann Landers discusses teen-age drinking-- its myths, its realities. Learn the facts by reading, "Booze and You-- For Teen- Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35c in coin and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope.

Librarian Courses At Kelly

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Southeast Missouri State University plans to offer two graduate workshops in the field of library science on Saturday at Kelly Elementary School in Benton, Dr. Willard J. Morgan, director of school services at the university, has announced. Each will be for one semester hour of credit.

Enrollment for one or both workshops will begin at 8:45 a.m. Saturday in the library of the school. In order to materialize, each workshop must have at least 17 students enrolled. The fee is $17 per workshop.

The first workshop, Cataloging of Non-Print Materials, will meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. this Saturday and again during the same hours on Nov. 4 and Nov. 11. It will be taught by Miss Elizabeth Brewer, instructor of library science at the university.

The second workshop, Organization of Non-Print Materials, will be taught from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Nov. 18, Dec. 2 and Dec. 9. The instructor will be Robert Gilligan, a visiting professor of education at Southeast Missouri State.

Credit earned in the workshops will apply toward certification requirements for school librarians, according to Dr. Morgan.

Dr. Morgan said the courses were developed at the request of librarians, audio -visual directors and teachers in the university service area.

They are designed, he said, to study and practice the preparation, circulation, management and use of non-book materials, simple mending and repair of audio - visual materials and the upkeep of audio-visual equipment.

Her Sign Reads 'Out To Sex'

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Instead of the typical "Out to Lunch" sign, the one in Susan Johnston's office at police headquarters reads: "Out to Sex."

That's because when the 26-year-old divorcee is not in the office she may be acting as a decoy in one of the city's high sex crime areas, walking through a park or along a street, waiting for someone to try to abduct or rape her.

She works with eight other officers, all men, in the sex crime unit of the crimes against persons division.

"I realize there is a potential danger in my job but I'm well protected," the petite mother of a 3-year-old girl said. "There are always about eight or 10 men nearby who assist in the capture."

Detective Johnston was to have lunch with President Nixon in Washington today and meet with members of the Justice Department.

She shares the honor with nine other officers who recently were presented awards at the Police Service Program at Salt Lake City, sponsored by Parade magazine and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

She is the only woman to receive the award.

Mrs. Johnston is in her final year of night school at Central Missouri State University at Warrensburg, where she is majoring in law enforcement. She started work in the police department seven and a half years ago.

She was promoted to police - woman upon completion of a training course and worked in the youth and women's division before being transferred to her present job six months ago.

"At first my parents were very upset about my job," the detective said. "They were afraid I would be depressed by my work. But now that they have seen nothing bad has happened to me, they've changed their minds.

"My mother calls me the hired gun."

In addition to her work in the sex crimes unit she gives lessons in self-defense through the department's community relations unit.

"Men that I date sometimes are bewildered," she said, 'but they feel well protected."

About her job, she said, "I know that I'm doing a job that needs to be done - getting rapists off the streets."

Detective Johnston said there is no discrimination against women in the police department.

"There is no differentiation between my duties and those of the men in the unit," said. "I handle all types of sex crimes.

Reading Workshop Conducted

LILBOURN — A reading workshop, conducted by Dr. Dianne Poll for New Madrid County R-1s elementary teachers, was hosted by Lilbourn Elementary School teachers.

Teachers from the New Madrid, Parma, Lilbourn Matthews and Portageville units, as well as guests from North Pemiscot schools, attended the workshop.

The afternoon was spent in creating reading tools, games and aids from scrap and low-cost materials. Teachers working with pizza boards, clothes pins, tag board and shoe laces created a wide variety of materials to be used as aids for individualized small group instruction.

Other workshops are anticipated.

Speaker At Kiwanis Meeting

Ira Meredith, building committee chairman for the Jaycees, spoke to the Kiwanis Club meeting Tuesday night at Ramada Inn on the many uses and advantages of Sikeston Activity Center.

Meredith stated that, in 1969, the city applied for a grant from the government for the activity center and asked the Jaycees to sponsor it. Total of the grant was $262,123 and the city matched funds. They purchased the old First Baptist Church building at South Kingshighway and Trotter Street.

The first bid for the renovation project was $34,000 over what was hoped for, and a building committee had to take items out of the plans in order to get the bid down to the allotted amount, he stated.

Meredith said CAD Construction Co. of Dexter was contracted to remodel the building. The city accepted the building in February of this year.

The Social Security and Veterans Administration use offices in the building. C. F. Cline, unopposed candidate for state representative, will have an office one day a week to confer with people about problems he may help with as a representative of the area.

Others using the building are Church Women United, Senior Citizens, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, County Health Department, Little Theatre and Alcoholics Anonymous.

Administrators of the activity center hope Head Start will start using the building in February. The center should be paying for itself in one year, Meredith declared.

The United Fund donated $1,500 this year to the center.

Meredith also told the club that the auditorium in the center can be rented for $35 plus janitorial service.

Bill Mead of Associated Natural Gas was a guest of the club.

If I had my life to live over, I would try to make more mistakes next time. I would relax. I would limber up. I would be simpler and sillier than I have been this trip. I know of few things that I would take seriously. I would be less solemn. I would burn less midnight oil. I would go to bed early and get plenty of rest, so that I could enjoy the sunrise as well as the beautiful sunsets. I would take more trips. I would burn more gasoline, climb more mountains and swim more rivers. I would eat more ice cream and less bran. I would have fewer imaginary troubles. Yes:

I'd have fewer papers and smaller books, I'd have more capers and beauty-shop looks, I'd do my best to teach the little brats, But I'd strengthen my spirit with pretty hats. I'd wear fewer blouses and skirts, Straight lines and staid browns and blues, I'd get lots of pretty lacy dresses, And I'd wear them all with high-heeled shoes!

You have known lots of school teachers like me. You see, I am one of those people who live sanely, sensibly, prudently -- minute after minute, hour after hour, day after day, year after year. Oh, I have had my moments! But if I had my life to live over again, I'd have more of them -- without a thermometer, a hot water bottle, a gargle, a raincoat and a parachute. If I had it to do over again, I would go more places and do more things, and I'd travel lighter than I have.

If I had my life to live over, I would look for the good in others, and in the things about me, instead of always seeing the unpleasant things of life. I would have more sweethearts. I would go to more dances. I would sing more songs and play more games. I would go to more circuses and ride on more merry-go-rounds. I would pick more daisies.

If you hold your nose to the grindstone rough, And keep it down there long enough, You will soon forget there are such things as brooks that babble and birds that sing! These three things will your world compose: Just you, and a stone -- and your darned old nose!

Yes, as I think it over, I'd look for a little more fun in life. I'd pick more daisies!

Woman Assigned To Ship

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When Navy Ensign Nelson steps onto the deck, the sailors knock off the salty talk.

Rosemary Nelson has become the first woman officer in the Navy to be assigned a sea-going billet.

When the hospital ship Sanctuary steams out of Hunters Point Naval Shipyard next month, she will be in charge of 39 stewards and three disbursing clerks.

She'll also be the ship's paymaster.

"That could make me very popular or very unpopular, said the pert, 24-year- old brunette from Walla Walla, Wash.

But Miss Nelson, who reported aboard the Sanctuary a week ago, says she doesn't expect a sea of troubles in her new assignment.

"I won't have any problems different from any other young officer," she said. "I'm an officer and I expect my men to follow my orders."

And she says she's not worried about whether she's "saluted and such.

"It's the attitude that counts. A man who is lax on saluting can be a good worker."

But Miss Nelson, who designed her own shipboard work uniform of a long-sleeved white blouse and black slacks, will have more than her men to worry about.

She has donned rubber boots and an oxygen breathing appratus to fight fires at a damage control school, training which will prepare her for a supervisory role during shipboard emergencies, said her department head, Lt. Harry Wright.

She says she may even try to qualify as an officer of the deck and navigate the big, white-hulled Sanctuary, even though her specialty as a supply officer doesn't require it.

"I think it would be fun and good experience," she says.

Frank Smith Promoted

MEXICO — Cadet Frank Smith of Sikeston has been promoted to master sergeant in the Reserve Officers Training Corps unit at Missouri Military Academy.

Lt. Col. John Starke, commandant of cadets, said the promotion was made for scholastic, athletic and leadership progress attained in the M.M.A. Cadet Corps.

Missouri Military Academy is an 84-year- old school for boys in fourth through 12th grades. Last year its ROTC unit was named "honor unit with distinction" by Fifth Army inspectors.

Cadet Smith is the son of Mrs. David Blanton, 1103 N. Kingshighway, Sikeston, and Frank Smith of West Palm Beach, Fla.

Kit Bond Kidding Days Over?

A residency suit filed Wednesday at Jefferson City challenging the qualifications of State Auditor Christopher S. (Kit) Bond to run for the Republican nomination for governor has caused reverberations throughout the Republican and Democratic parties.

The open claypits where children have lost their lives not to mention how they have marred the beauty of our countrysides, attest to the money that is behind this man Bond for whatever he wants at the expense of the people and state. Kit, fortunately for himself, is a branch of the A. P. Green Co. of Mexico, Mo., whose wealth in the form of fireclays was extracted from the land hereabouts. What has been taken away is marked by the ugly pits with water. Not all raping of the good earth was done by the Green Company but most of them were. The beauty of the Belle Community Fair grounds awaits the mining by the Green Company who owns the mineral rights to the grounds, and when that time comes windows of homes all about are to be smashed by the explosions. So you can understand what it's all about. The state is not playing with penny firecrackers when it sets about having a rich man like Kit Bond level with the people.

Not only does Kit command all the wealth he needs for whatever purpose he desires, whether it be for governor of Missouri or for clearing his name, he also has trustworthy John 'Jack' Danforth, the attorney general, to intercede for him and to see things the "checkerboard" way, as generally conceded in the past. Danforth also is an interpreter of the holy writ, bringing together both what is morally right with what is legally so. It is almost an unbeatable combination.

Democrats particularly are aware of the possibility that Bond could be ousted as auditor if the residency decision goes against him. In this case, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, a Democrat, would be able to appoint someone to complete Bond's term, as he would do were Bond nominated and elected. Bond has said otherwise but even his enemies give him credit for knowing what any high school student knows. That no person may hold two elective offices at the same time.

Bill Bradley, New York Knicks basketball player, already has been suggested to Hearnes as a successor. Bond's term runs for two more years.

Bradley, of Crystal City, had considered running this year for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer, but decided against it at the last minute.

He is ineligible to be auditor at the present, because he will not be 30 years old until July 28, 1973. The auditor must meet the same qualifications as the governor, who also must be 30.

Other Democrats mentioned as possible successors to the auditorship include, John C. Vaughn, state comptroller and budget director; Thomas A. David, director of the Highway Department, and James I. Spainhower, candidate for the Democratic nomination for treasurer.

The qualifications for governor include residence in Missouri for 10 years. Bond has admitted that in filling out an application to take the Georgia bar examination in 1964 he stated that he lived in Atlanta.

However, he contends that he did not give up up his Missouri residency, because he always maintained his voting address in the state.

Dr. Martin S. Greenberg, St. Louis county Democratic chairman, has said that if the Missouri Supreme Court disqualified Bond as a governor candidate, Democrats would sue to remove him as auditor, inasmuch as the qualifications are identical.

The complexities of the case have raised numerous questions:

(1) If Bond is removed as auditor, does Haskell Holman, the incumbent defeated by Bond in 1970, return as auditor? One provision of the law says that an officeholder holds his post until a successor is duly elected and qualified.

(2) If Bond is removed as auditor, are the audits performed by his office for the last year and a half legal?

(3) Can the suits challenging Bond's gubernatorial candidacy or his right to remain auditor be appealed to the federal courts, thus leaving a question mark hanging over the primary and general elections indefinitely? Some lawyers think grounds could be found for such an appeal.

(4) Would the Missouri Supreme Court refuse to remove Bond from the auditorship on the grounds that he already had been qualified for office, thus forcing Democrats in the Missouri House to impeach him if they wanted him out?

One provision of the state constitution says that the Legislature shall be the sole judge of the qualifications of its members, and the Supreme Court has refused to oust elected legislators on this ground. But there is no such provision on elected state officials.

The suit against Bond as a candidate for governor was filed by State Representative R. J. (Bus) King Jr., Clayton, one of Bond's opponents in the Republican primary.

The suit includes a copy of the application signed by Bond to take the Georgia bar examination. It is on file at the Fulton County (Atlanta) Superior Court. Bond was a law clerk in a federal court there in 1964.

Bond signed the application, in which he said his home address was 55 Pharr Road, N. W., Atlanta, and that he had been a resident of the State of Georgia and had resided in Georgia at that address for six months.

Bond said he was confident that he could win any court test because he had kept his voting residence in Mexico, Mo., since 1960, when he was 21.

He said that the Democrats had brought up the question of his residency when he ran for auditor but had dropped it after he showed his voting record.

However, it had not been learned at that time that Bond had declared his residency in Georgia in such a formal application.

Danforth, a close friend and Republican ally of Bond, had been asked to begin local action to remove Bond from his position as auditor.

State Representative James E. Spain (Dem.) Bloomfield, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for attorney general, made the request.

But Jack is pretty busy these days playing the game cool to defeat Jimmie Kirkpatrick for secretary of state. The Danforth family hails from southeastern Missouri where brother Daniel is campaign manager for Jack's hand-picked Harold D. (Wheels) Kuehle, of Cape Girardeau county to become Jimmie's successor. No one has even asked who's backing Kuehle or if Kuehle is paying his pocket expense.

Kit has been generally confused about it all. He has purchased new autos and for avoiding payment of sales taxes claimed other states as his legal residence. Even to his education, not really a skeleton in the closet, as political scandals go. But another example of a politician not quite telling the whole truth.

In this case it concerns Bond's schooling, and where he got it.

Bond has been hiding the fact that he attended Deerfield Academy in Deerfield, Mass.

Bond entered Deerfield, an exclusive eastern prep school, after two years of high school in Mexico, Mo., and was graduated in 1956. When he was younger, he attended a private elementary school in Arizona for a few years.

In the biography that he has distributed to the press, Bond boasts that he is a "sixth generation Missourian, born inSt. Louis and raised in Mexico, Mo., where he attended grade school and high school."

In a voters guide prepared by the League of Women Voters of Missouri, Bond says he received his grade and high school education in Mexico.

And in the Official Manual of the State of Missouri, Bond says he was reared in Mexico, and "attended grade school and high school in Mexico."

In none of these sources does he indicate that he attended Deerfield, although he mentions that he was graduated from Princeton University with honors and was the top graduate in his class at the University of Virginia Law School.

Deerfield is a school reserved mostly for sons of the rich from throughout the country.

Caroline, Kit's wife, is telling the people what Haskell Holman said two years ago, that the auditor really doesn't have the power to do much without the governor's permission. Caroline says that is the reason she wants her husband to be governor.

She is telling the people no more than what the knowledgable already knows. Anyway the state highway patrol is continuing at St. James what Kit has yet to hear right at the soldiers home there and haven't been for the last two years.

Somebody will have to do the auditing there. Will it be Haskell Holman, Kit Bond, Bill Bradley, or John C. Vaughn, Thomas A. David, or James I. Spainhower? Missouri certainly needs an auditor. No doubt about that.

Released Reporter Says Papers Should Protect News Sources

BELLEVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Peter Bridge, the newsman who was jailed 21 days for refusing to answer a grand jury's questions about a story he wrote, says the news media should assert its right to protect confidential sources.

"Every news media outlet ought to poll the candidates for public office to determine where they stand on the issue of legislation providing a shield for reporters," Bridge said Wednesday during an interview at his home in this suburb of Newark.

The media should consider a politician's stand on newsman's privilege when considering endorsements.

"If they can use the power of the judiciary and the prosecutorial system to mass an attack on the free press," said the 36-year-old reporter, "then the press has the right, and the responsibility, to use every device available to insure the free flow of information."

Bridge was trying to relax at home following his release Tuesday from the Essex County Jail. But an avalanche of mail and telephone calls kept him hopping.

"The phone hasn't stopped ringing," said Bridge as he interrupted the interview for the first of many times to take calls from newspapers and television and radio stations.

Discussing a stack of mail, Bridge smiled and said, "The letters are all 100 per cent behind me. It's amazing this issue has been so quickly and well understood by people across the country."

Bridge entered jail Oct. 4, a day after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 8 to 1 not to stay his sentence to hear an appeal. He was the first newsman jailed since the Supreme Court ruled in June that newsmen must answer grand jury questions.

Bridge was cited for contempt for refusing to answer some questions posed by an Essex County grand jury about a story he wrote in the Evening News of Newark last May.

Bridge quoted a Newark Housing Authority commissioner as saying she was offered a $10,000 bribe to influence her for vote for the authority's new executive director.

Bridge was freed after a New Jersey Superior Court judge dismissed the grand jury, which was dismissed Wednesday.

Bridge says his lawyer will continue to appeal his contempt conviction. If he loses the fight in New Jersey's courts he intends to take it to the U.S. Supreme Court again.

"Just because they've voted not to give me a stay doesn't mean they've decided on the merits of the case," Bridge said.

Mrs. McGovern Back From Rest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eleanor McGovern is back home following a five-day vacation in the Virgin Islands.

The wife of Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern had been sidelined from her own active campaign because of exhaustion and an attack of abdominal pains that sent her to the hospital briefly.

She returned here Wednesday night.

IRS Turns Back $5,000 Pay Hike For Missouri Judges

ST. LOUIS — The Internal Revenue Service turned back an across the board $5,000 pay hike for Missouri judges Tuesday because it violates Federal Pay Board Rules which limit raises to 5.5 per cent.

In most cases, the 300 Missouri judges would have received increases of nearly 20 per cent. Supreme Court judges, for example, would have had their salaries raised from $26,500 to $31,500 and appellate judges from $25,000 to $30,000.

The Missouri General Assembly appropriated about $3 million in raises for the judges during the recent special session. The salary hike bill was approved during the general session which ended in April and went into effect Aug. 13.

Notices of the IRS' decision were filed with the Missouri secretary of state, the governor's office and the state treasurer, all in Jefferson City.

The IRS noted the increases were being paid without obtaining prior approval from the pay board. The courts and the governor can appeal the IRS decision.

How Do YOU Feel About Personal Property Tax?

"I would abolish all personal property tax as soon as possible . . . it's a hardship on our older citizens and it can be easily replaced by Federal revenue sharing." That's how Ed Dowd feels about personal property tax! If you feel the same way, then Ed Dowd is your man for Missouri's Governor.

Gallup Poll Shows McGovern Gaining

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The Gallup Poll reports that Democrat George McGovern is continuing to gain but still remains 23 percentage points behind President Nixon in their race for the presidency.

McGovern's greatest gains were among manual workers, where he narrowed Nixon's lead to only 5 points — 49 to 44 per cent, the poll reported Wednesday. In August it was 63 to 28.

The over-all standings showed Nixon with 59 per cent to 36 per cent for McGovern, one per cent for other candidates and four per cent undecided, Gallup said.

The poll, taken from Oct. 13 to 18, was based on questioning 1,220 registered voters.

August was the low point for McGovern in the Gallup poll. A survey then showed Nixon with 64 per cent to 30 per cent for McGovern and six per cent either undecided or for other candidates.

McGovern has gained in each Gallup poll since then. Gallup said the movement of manual workers back toward their traditional Democratic allegiance explained most of the Democrat's increase.

McGovern has also picked up some strength among Catholics and under-30 voters, Gallup said, but Nixon continues to lead in all major population groups except blacks and Jews.

Time is a relative matter, and always passes slowest when they're visiting.

Britian Will Reintroduce Progestogen Mini Pills; Find No Evidence Of Cancer Cause

LONDON (AP) — A British government committee says contraceptive pills, including the progestogen minipill, do not cause cancer.

After a six-year investigation, the Committee on the Safety of Medicines said in a report today:

"The evidence does not show that long-term use of oral contraceptives in their present formulation may give rise to cancer."

Drug manufacturers will be licensed to make 10 new brands of the pill, including five of the progestogen type withdrawn two years ago after American reports that it created tumors in beagle dogs.

British doctors said beagles were prone to breast cancer anyway. Britain will become the first country to reintroduce the minipills, which contain only the hormone progestogen, do not cause blood clots and have few side effects.

The committee based its report on experiments in which hundreds of rats and mice were injected with massive dosages of estrogen and progestogen to assess the cancer risk.

No Americans Dead Last Week In SE Asia

SAIGON (AP) — No Americans were reported killed in action in Indochina last week, the U.S. Command announced today, but one died of nonhostile causes, four were reported missing or captured and 14 were wounded.

It was the second week in five that the Command has reported no deaths in combat.

The South Vietnamese Command reported 2,785 enemy and 580 of its own troops killed, the highest weekly totals in a month. It said 2,075 government troops were wounded and 146 missing.

The allied commands now have listed these total casualties for the war:

American — 45,884 killed in action, 303,475 wounded in action, 10,281 dead of nonhostile causes, 1,699 missing or captured.

South Vietnamese — 157,917 killed, 417,167 wounded.

North Vitnamese and Viet Cong — 901,967 killed.

The U.S. Command also announced the deactivation of 19 Army and Air Force support units and resumed the withdrawal of an A37 jet squadron which had been delayed by enemy activity in the Saigon area. The units totaled 1,210 men.

These withdrawals lowered U.S. troop strength in Vietnam to less than 33,000 men. President Nixon has set a goal of 27,000 by Dec. 1.

Fall Foliage At Peak In South Of State Next 2 Weeks

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — If you don't have those photographs of Missouri's autumn colors, you'd better get them this weekend, says the state Department of Conservation.

The leaves, pushed along by rain and cold temperatures, are starting to fall.

The color is in its peak in northern Missouri, but the leaves should remain on the trees perhaps two more weeks in southern Missouri, department spokesmen say.

Dogwoods — the state tree — are beginning to lose their bright red leaves.

Last weekend, which had a substantial rain, was the peak of the color season in northern Missouri. The peak in southern Missouri should be the next two weekends, conservationists say.

Stars To Attend Cape Democratic Banquet

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Marlo Thomas and Peter Lawford, television and movie stars, will be in Cape Girardeau Friday to attend the annual Cape Girardeau County Democratic Dinner at Holiday Inn, Cape Girardeau.

Guest speaker will be Sen. Stuart Symington. Rep. Bill D. Burlison of Cape Girardeau will also attend.

Lawford is a regular member of the CBS "Doris Day Show". He also makes regular appearances on the NBC morning program, "Hollywood Squares".

A reception will begin at 5 p.m., with dinner served at 7. Tickets are available from Democratic Headquarters, 20 North Spanish, Cape Girardeau, or by phoning 334-5063. Cost for the combined reception and dinner is $10 per person, with sponsor tickets available for $50 per person.

Linn Named As Acting Head Of Campus School

CAPE GIRARDEAU — An associate professor of Southeast Missouri State University's division of education and psychology, Dr. Frank J. Linn, has been appointed acting director of the university's Campus School.

The appointment, effective Monday, fills the vacancy left by Harold F. Kiehne of Gordonville, who died of a heart attack on Oct. 3 at the age of 55.

In announcing Dr. Linn's appointment, Dr. Milford Holt, division head, said Dr. Linn probably would serve through the end of the school year, at which time a permanent director would be hired.

Dr. Linn, a member of the division since September 1967, will serve as director of the elementary and high schools on a part-time basis.

Originally from Marshfield in southwest Missouri, Dr. Linn, 42, has both elementary and secondary education experience. He received a bachelor of science degree and a master's degree in education from Drury College, Springfield. He did graduate work at Southwest Missouri State University, Springfield.

Making The Hero Of Watergate

in the
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON — There is no doubt in my mind that the Justice Department has conducted the most thorough investigation into the Watergate bugging affair that was humanly possible. The fact that they were unable to trace any of the money in the case to any higher-ups in the Committee for the Re-election of the President was good news to all of us who hate to think that any of our political leaders would be involved in such a sordid affair.

Of course there are certain psychological factors at work in such an investigation which no one can control. When the President's own attorney general is asked to look into a scandal in the President's own party, there is always the suspicion that something was covered up.

The person I feel the most sorry for is the poor bureaucrat in the Justice Department who was called into his superior's office one day and told, "Hapless, the President of the United States of America wants you to investigate the Watergage bugging affair and all its ramifications."

"Gosh, that's a big assignment."

"The President of the United States, who happens to be President of all the people as well as the leader of the most powerful country in the world, expects you to treat this as just another case."

"He does?"

"That is correct. He has instructed the attorney general that even if his own political party is involved, and his own close personal friends are to be investigated, and his re-election is at stake, he still wants the truth to be made public at the earliest opportunity."

"Even before Nov. 7?"

"The President is more concerned in the illegal uses of wiretapping and bugging than he is in what happens on Nov. 7. You owe it to the President and the attorney general to see that every bit of evidence in this case is available to the grand jury."

"Why me?"

"He feels, as does the attorney general, that you will do the job, regardless of jeopardy to your upcoming promotion or the consequences to your future with the Justice Department.

"I might add that as your superior I am proud that the attorney general has selected someone from my staff. I have as much at stake in this thing as you do, Hapless. Whatever you turn up will personally reflect on me as well as this department. We shall all be watching you closely."

"Don't you have a Mafia case I could have instead?"

"No, Hapless. Anyone in this department can investigate a Mafia case. But there are very few men we can trust to handle an investigation this explosive. It is your duty to our President and the attorney general whom you will be working for, God willing, for the next four years, to give us the truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God."

Through carelessness or incendiarism, man is blamed for the largest portion of U.S. forest fires. During 1970, some 103,619 fires, or 89 per cent of those reported on protected lands, were caused by people, The World Almanac notes. Many millions of acres of federal, state and private lands are protected under the Federal-State Cooperative Forest Fire Control Program.

Special Breast Cancer Test Reduces Death By One-Third

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An experimental yearly screening program in New York has resulted in reduction of breast cancer death rates by one-third, says a report on a new five-year study.

However, the manual and X-ray tests reduced the mortality rate only in women over 50.

The report on breast cancer — the No. 1 fatal cancer among women — is to be presented today at the Seventh National Cancer Conference sponsored by the American Medical Society and the National Cancer Institute.

A preview of the study was presented at a Thursday news conference by Sam Shapiro, director of research and statistics of the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York.

A total of 62,000 female participants in the insurance plan were studied, he said. Half were offered the annual screening and half were not.

Within five years, 42 per cent of the unscreened women who got breast cancer died from it, Shapiro said.

Of those in the study group, only 28 per cent of those who contracted breast cancer died in five years. In addition, some women in the study group refused screening, and the death rate for those who actually underwent examination was only 17 per cent.

The diagnostic tools used in searching for early breast cancer were clinical examination, manual palpitation by a doctor and mammography, X-rays of the breast.

Shapiro couldn't explain why the screening program had little effect on women in the under-50 group.

"It may have something to do with the kinds of cancer women get before menopause and the kind they get after menopause, but we just don't know," he said.

It turned out that mammography, which is much more sensitive than the manual examination, played a large part in the reduced mortality for the over-50 women, he said.

Shapiro said that only 2 per cent of the cancers detected by mammography led to deaths in the five-year period.

The results of the five-year study, he said, justify expansion of the screening program to more women. This would be especially important for women who, because of certain aspects of their medical history, are high-risk breast cancer targets, Shapiro said.

Edie Adams Opera Debut Brings Offers

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What started as a lark might turn into an opera career for Edie Adams, more widely known as a portrayer of sexy dames and seller of cigars.

Earlier this month, the blonde actress completed four performances in the lead role of Offenbach's "LaPerichole" in a fully staged production by the Seattle Opera Company. She astonished audiences and critics alike with her full, rich soprano.

Back at her home in the Beverly Hills, Calif., Miss Adams seemed pleased with the experience — and with the offers that are beginning to come for appearances with symphony orchestras across the country.

"Are they ready for me?" she mused. "I know that I am ready, musically. But it might be too much of a shock for people to hear an operatic voice coming out of my face."

The Seattle engagement happened by accident, she said. Two years ago, she appeared on a television talk show in Seattle with Glynn Ross, "an amazing man who runs opera in Seattle and makes it pay off; the company has no deficit."

Edie mentioned that she sang opera as well as popular songs. Ross heard her sing at a Gay 90s night at the Hollywood Bowl and signed her up for "La Perichole."

"It was a noncancellable contract, and I figured I could block out the time for it," she said. "Wouldn't you know — when the date finally arrived, I had an offer to play Las Vegas for the biggest money I ever got!"

It was worth it, she remarked, to "revive a voice that had been in mothballs for 15 years."

As a youngster in New York, she had studied classical singing at the Juilliard School of Music and took private lessons from such divas as Helen Jepson, Dusolina Gianinni and Maria Kurenko. But a Broadway role as the sister Eileen in "Wonderful Town" started her career of playing "Sexy, dumb- smart blondes."

BRUCE BIOSSAT

Watergate Points To the Bad in Us

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
WASHINGTON (NEA)

There's a lot of astonishment in this town over the fact that things like the Watergate bugging case and related instances of alleged political spying and sabotage aren't "grabbing" the American people in this election.

Generally, those who test the nation's views and attitudes tell us that people dismiss these matters quite cynically, saying that's "politics" and indicating they regard neither major party as being above such shenanigans.

The findings undoubtedly are accurate, as far as they go. But the story is really much larger.

While much is being made these days of popular discontent and distrust of government and politicians, only a modest part of that feeling has to do with complaints about honesty and integrity. The truth is that an inordinately large number of Americans today hold neither their public figures nor themselves to consistent standards of good behavior.

Cheating and stealing at nearly all ages and every sort of place is accepted as normal and often quite permissible. I have been in dozens of offices where it is taken for granted that if you leave anything of even minor value unguarded for a few moments, it will disappear. Not even our cheap ball-point pen is safe.

Even so, I was staggered recently to learn that, in the fair-sized office quarters of a highly respected firm where access by outsiders is limited, men's wallets were vanishing when they left their suitcoats behind while visiting another room.

Many of the transgressions can be viewed as "minor," but they are highly revealing of attitude. For instance, in most cities the fire laws forbid smoking in movie houses and other theaters. The next time you go, check around. Usually a number of people within your range are lighting up. (As a sideline on this habit, officials at the June state Democratic convention in Minnesota asked the hundreds of delegates not to smoke in the crowded convention hall, whereupon some irate woman arose to shout that nobody would stop her from smoking, that it was a violation of her constitutional rights.)

Simple things are made complex by bad behavior. Escalators are made to carry people up or down, right? Well, in this age, not necessarily. They are fun spots for the kiddies, including teen-agers, who cavort on them as if they were exhibits at Coney Island. I watched a theater manager spending nearly half his time trying to keep his escalator from being damaged by abuse.

The mere physical movement of people in public places has changed. Gathered in crowds at political or other events, they often push and shove in ways perilous to others and themselves. The mad capers which frequently accompany victory for the home baseball or football team are turning into orgies of truly vicious vandalism.

Even in small clusters, there is a curious, disorderly restlessness in people's movements. Patient, quiet waiting is out. While the doors are still closed before some event begins, you'll see people dashing about, crisscrossing each other's paths as if they were somehow alone in space, lounging on floors like exhausted athletes.

These things are minor but symptomatic. The big thing is that too many today neither practice nor believe in standards of behavior. Why should they get excited about Watergate? What the politicians do is a lot of what they, themselves do.

Divide Medical Quality

Divide a city down the middle and give one quality of medical care to one half and a different quality to the other half. Doesn't sound easy does it? People would complain.

It is possible in cities such as Texarkana, straddling the Arkansas - Texas Border. The division and differences in treatment are caused by differences in each state's medical practices.

This division has recently provided a unique demonstration of the effectiveness of measales vaccine, says Phillip J. Landrigan in the Journal of the American Medical Association. When a measles epidemic struck the Texarkana area, 633 cases of measels were counted.

Of those, 606 were on the Texas side where vaccination levels were low. In Arkansas, Dr. Landrigan reports, where immunity levels were much higher, there was no epidemic.

Pupils Have Vote Getting Ideas

MIAMI (AP) — Pupils at Shenandoah Junior High School think one way of getting voters to the polls Nov. 7 is to give out free kisses at the ballot box.

The students have other ideas for getting out the vote:

No tax refunds unless a person votes, church bells ringing every hour on election day, voting machines made to look like slot machines and entertainment at the polls and block parties with bingo and crap games.

The suggestions were part of a brainstorm session held by science teacher Morton Raisen.

Dade County Elections Supervisor Joyce Diefender said Tuesday some of the ideas have merit and are already under consideration.

Stocks Jump At Peace News From Kissinger

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices spurted upward on the stock market today on word from presidential aide Henry A. Kissinger that "peace is at hand."

On the New York Stock Exchange the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks stood at 963.04, up 1.66 points, when word of his statement was received. Thirty minutes later, at 1 p.m., it was up 6.33 to 967.71.

Trading immediately became brisk.

Brokers said the rally was spreading through the list, including cyclicals, blue-chips and glamour issues.

Advancing issues established about a 3-1 lead over declining stocks.

McGovern Versus Nixon Is Self Debate For George

DETROIT (AP) — Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern is working on a doit-yourself debate with President Nixon, the campaign rival he accuses of a "betrayal of the public trust" in the White House.

Frustrated in his effort to goad Nixon into any kind of personal debate, McGovern today planned to prepare a television program in which he answers a series of filmed Nixon statements compiled by the Democratic campaign organization.

"It will be a kind of debate," the South Dakota senator said.

He turned to that project after a campaign Wednesday concentrated on the issue of alleged corruption, wiretapping, and political sabotage—items he said would tip the election in his favor.

McGovern said his publicopinion analyst, Pat Cadell, had reported those topics are beginning to "show up now" as a significant issue, particularly among independents and Republicans.

"I think that may be one of the sleepers of the campaign," McGovern said. He campaigned to capitalize on charges—denied by the White House—that H. R. Haldeman, a top Nixon aide, shared control of a secret $700,000 campaign fund used to finance spying and sabotage against Democrats.

The account linking Haldeman and the secret political money was published by The Washington Post. McGovern claimed no independent knowledge, but he worked it hard.

"This places the whole ugly mess of corruption, espionage and sabotage, squarely in the lap of Richard Nixon," he said. McGovern talked of government corruption and political sabotage Wednesday night in a nationally televised address he called "perhaps the most important speech of the campaign."

"The men who have collected millions in secret money, who have passed out special favors, who have ordered political sabotage, who have invaded our offices in the dead of night—all of these men work for Mr. Nixon ...," he said.

McGovern said he cannot understand why Nixon "doesn't feel some moral obligation" to tell the American people what has really happened. And, as he does almost daily, he challenged Nixon to face-toface debate.

McGovern's television adviser, Charles Guggenheim, assembled the Nixon tapes and film clips for the quasi-debate.

McGovern said he did not know when the program would be shown.

The format had McGovern responding extemporaneously to Nixon's statements on the war, the economy and other issues. McGovern said the Nixon films were chosen in an effort to fairly represent the President's positions. "We leaned over backwards not to pick things that make him look bad," he said.

Bulldogs Can Play Spoiler

For the Sikeston Bulldogs and Coach Pete Cirrintano, IT is finally over. IT was their confrontation with perhaps the state's finest eleven, the Cape Girardeau Tigers. The Dogs came out of that contest with a 35-6 setback, but the inexperienced Dogs played well and were simply outclassed.

The Bulldogs have Coach Paul Webber of the Jackson Indians a bit worried. "Our scout told us they gave Cape perhaps the best game they played all year," Webber said. He then noted that the Dogs are a strong defensive team, and have some offensive firepower as well, in the form of quarterback Bill Colwick and his favorite receiver, Glen Guttenfelder.

The Cape defense held these two down last week, limiting Guttenfelder to just four catches and Colwick to just nine completions in 25 tries. The Cape front four harassed Colwick all night. Although he was dropped just twice, he was forced to throw early many times and the passing game was stopped.

However, that is all water under the bridge and Sikeston this week faces another fine team. Jackson is 6-1 so far with an outside shot at the state playoffs at the end of the season. "We cannot afford another loss," Webber related. Jackson's only loss was to the Cape powerhouse, 49-6.

The Cape offense is run by promising junior quarterback Mark Jones. Jackson runs the wishbone attack and Jones is a perfect person for the job. The 175-pounder is a fast runner with a rifle arm. His passing is a bit erratic, but he is gaining polish fast.

Joining Jones in the backfield is one of the area's top runners. Shadowed only by the fantastic Paul Schermann of Cape in the conference scoring race is little Loren Sides. Sides, another junior, is a quick, shifty runner who is extremely hard to bring down. The other two running backs in the wishbone formation are fullback Mike Litzelfelner and tailback Ted Leimer. Litzelfelner, a 165-pound senior, does most of the heavy work in the Indian offense. Leimer, a sprinter- type, joins Sides in making the wide game go.

Two other standouts perform for the Indians. One of the area's top ends is Terry Langston. Langston is the primary receiver when Jackson is forced to throw long. The senior split end is fast with very fine hands, and his total catches is low only because Jackson's running game is averaging over 280 yards per game.

Sikeston needs to get the offense moving again, after being held to just 127 yards last week against Cape. They won't find the Jackson defense obliging, however. The defensive pursuit, led by linebacker Lawrence Swan, is fabulous. Only Cape has been able to score more than once on the Indians, while three opponents have been shut out.

By comparison, the Indians' average point yield is just less than 10 points per game, while Sikeston's defense is allowing 21.1 per contest.

Missing from the contest will be senior linebacker Roy Yarber. Yarber will be replaced by sophomore Charles Scott in the contest. The Dogs will miss their defensive leader, but they will miss him more on offense. The 190-pounder lended much needed bulk to the offensive line.

The entire contest seems to hinge on Sikeston's offensive line. If the blockers do their job and hold the Indians, front five out, Colwick and Guttenfelder could do a job on Jackson. If the holes are there, Smith and Bean could help Sikeston move the ball. If they give Colwick protection, he will have time to spot secondary receivers such as Rick Eisenbach and John Farris.

A lot of ifs are involved, especially with the absence of Yarber. However, the big worry is off the team's mind, and the Bulldogs can now settle down and play their brand of football. This game should tell Sikeston fans a lot about their team's heart, if they don't already know.

Randy Gardner, the leader most of the season, has failed to score in the past two games and dropped to third with seven TDS for 42 points.

Young. Decisive. Daring.
Our "Geometrics" Striped Suit from The Escadrille Collection by Hart Schaffner & Marx

Different. For the young minded man who wants to be a cut above the crowd, but tastefully so because it's tailored by none other than Hart Schaffner & Marx.

Stripes of a different stripe, made up of tiny "geometric" patterns in pure wool cheviot, in fall-favored colorings.

Styling that's different. A wide span of lapels accentuating the youthfully slim waist. "Framed" patch pockets, importantly large, with deep inlaid flaps. A center vent slashed dramatically high.

Decidely different. For the man who wouldn't have it any other way.

Blackwell Backs Dowd

HILLSBORO, Mo. (AP) — State Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, who was an unsuccessful candidate during the Democratic gubernatorial primary in August, endorsed Tuesday the candidacy of Edward L. Dowd, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate.

"My endorsement of Ed Dowd is not based on partisan politics," Blackwell said in a written statement.

"My judgement is based upon a comparison of both men as to sincerity, integrity, honest and forthrightness, as well as outlook on government and ability to govern," Blackwell said.

Dowd is opposed by the Republican candidate Christopher "Kit" Bond, Missouri state auditor.

Washington Report | By Senator Symington

WASHINGTON — At the close of the second session of the 92nd Congress, a $5.4 billion Social Security and welfare bill was sent to the White House for final approval.

This mammoth bill, passed after long debate, when signed by the President, will make some significant changes and additions to Social Security and welfare programs of importance to many Missourians and millions of Americans throughout the country.

WIDOW'S BENEFITS. Effective Jan. 1, social security benefits for widows or dependent widowers will be raised from 82.5 per cent to 100 per cent of the deceased spouse's Social Security entitlement.

MEDICARE. Starting July 1, 1973, medicare will be expanded to cover an estimated 1.7 million persons who have been entitled to social security disability benefits for not less than 24 consecutive months. Those covered by this provision include disabled workers at any age, disabled widows and disabled dependent widowers between ages 50 and 65, and disabled recipients of railroad retirement. Also covered are persons 18 years or older who have been receiving disability benefits due to a disability received before age 22.

RETIREES. Effective Jan. 1, Social Security retirees under age 72 may earn up to $2,100 a year without losing any benefits. If income is over $2,100, benefits would be reduced $1 for each $2 earned above the $2,100 ceiling. Under present law, $1,600 is the ceiling on outside income before benefits are reduced, and benefits are reduced by $1 for each $2 of earnings between $1,680 and $2,880 and $1 for each $1 above $2,880. This change will enable 1.2 million Social Security recipients to receive higher benefit payments, and 450,000 persons will receive benefits for the first time.

For those citizens over 72, benefits will not be reduced because of income, regardless of the amount.

For future Social Security retirees, a one percent increase would be added to benefits each year retirement is delayed beyond age 65.

AGED, BLIND, DISABLED. Effective January 1, a federal program will replace the various state welfare programs in aid to impoverished aged, blind and disabled persons.

Those now receiveing $20 or more in social security or other supplement payments will receive a minimum $130 in aged, blind and disabled monthly benefits without reducing other basic assistance. Earned income of up to $65 a month, and half of earnings above $65, would not reduce the amount a person receives in aged, blind, and disabled assistance. This provision is designed to allow aged, blind and disabled who can work to use their abilities and still receive highest benefits possible.

Earl Braswell

From very early times there have been superstitions about precious stones. Long ago, some stones were supposed to make anyone who wore them strong and brave. Others were supposed to protect their wearers from fire and lightning. Still others were supposed to bring good health and good fortunes. The idea of birthstones came from these superstitions. Each month was given a stone. Wearing this stone, people thought, would bring good fortune to anyone whose birthday was in the month. Not many people still have the old idea that precious stones can help or harm them. But many people do enjoy wearing their birthstones.

Many people still adhere to the old idea there's nothing that can be done about their tap water. They haven't heard about Refined Water, the product that obsoletes tap water by filtering, refining and softening. For a home demonstration call

Community Has Great Security; 1,400 Policemen Live There

SIMI, Calif. (AP)—There are only 34 working policemen in this Los Angeles suburb of 67,000, but there's plenty of sparetime protection. An estimated 1,400 law officers live here.

The officers say Simi's popularity is mostly a natural fluke, as when engineers, teachers or executives wind up in the same neighborhood.

"It's just a very nice area," says spokesman Sgt. Robert Sojka, a member of the city's police force. Apparently word got around of the new housing developments that younger, married officers could afford.

At any rate, Sojka says, "We have 1,400 families who are more or less in tune with the policeman's problems ... Our crime rate is rather low."

Barely on the map 10 years ago, the booming Ventura County community 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles didn't even get a full-time police force until about a year ago. Then the department came into being overnight, drawing officers from all over the state.

The new department, with an average age of about 35, stresses community relations, modern police technology and is looking for its first women patrol officer.

An estimated 1,000 of the officers who make their home here are members of the 5,000-member Los Angeles Police Department, officials said. The other 400 are from the Los Angeles County sheriff's office, the California Highway Patrol and the Ventura County sheriff's office.

Whats The Law?

The Case Of The Reluctant Patient

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Laid up in a hospital, middle- aged Clara was absolutely convinced that she was dying notwithstanding the fact that she was still breathing easily and her doctors were still smiling pleasantly. Her doctors, in fact, were so satisfied with her complete recovery from a relatively minor operation that they finally suggested that she pack up her imaginary infirmities and go home. She refused, insisting that death was probably only minutes away, and the hospital, in need of Clara's bed, took the matter to court. The hospital demanded Clara's immediate ouster on the grounds that she was a trespasser.

"I'm no trespasser," protested Clara. "Having been admitted, I'm in the hospital with the hospital's permission. I can't just be thrown out. Neither the law nor my delicate condition can allow it."

"We don't run a convalescent home," was the answer. "While Clara, like oleomargerine, may have seen butter days, that's no reason for her to stay in the hospital. And we want her out whether she was admitted with our permission or not.'.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order reluctant Clara to leave the hospital as a trespasser?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that when a patient in a private hospital refuses to leave when requested to do so, the patient becomes a trespasser. While a person may enter the property of another with permission, noted the judge in effect, if the permission is withdrawn, he becomes a trespasser by remaining.

TV Series Questions Police About Police Shows On The Tube

By JAY SHARBUTT
Ap Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP)— At least 22 new and used shows involving police currently are at large on television. They range from "Highway Patrol" to "Mod Squad" and use up a lot of blanks.

What do real- life police think of the shows? Nobody really has asked them. So one of the shows- "Police Surgeon" did the asking.

It occurred last July during a convention of the International Conference of Police Associations in Las Vegas, Nev. The show's staff gave the gendarmes a nine-point questionnaire.

The basic idea was to get in some drumbeating for "Surgeon," which is filmed in Toronto and stars Sam Groom.

But the poll, as it turns out, actually culled some interesting police views about television's man behind the badge and society's general attitude toward policeman.

About 200 conventioneers answered the "Surgeon" query. Only 15 responses were made available by the show's staff, but they seem to offer a fairly representative slice of current police opinion.

Nearly all the replies asked that shows about police try to depict law officers as human, subject to the same desires and frailties as the people they protect.

There was a predictably mixed response to the question, "How do you feel about the depiction of police and police work in television?"

One said it had been "tremendously upgraded" this year, another called it "Excellent." The remainder either siad it was fairly good or tended to overly glamorize police work without showing the long hours of routine that are a cop's life.

"Adam— 12 type programs depict about two months police work in 30 minutes," said a San Francisco officer, Michael S. Hebel. "These programs, if they depicted reality, would require a force of supermen."

"Police on TV get involved in too many shootouts," said D. Brent Mitchell, a Las Vegas patrolman who said only "Dragnet" and "Adam— 12" approach what actually goes on in police work.

He complained that television cops never make reports or get tied up in court and that "the very technical aspects— involving probable cause, landmark cases, search and seizure— are never shown being used by the officer making arrests in the field."

One of the key questions in the "Surgeon" poll didn't concern television. It asked the real cops which percentage of the public they felt was most sympathetic to the policeman and his problems.

The majority, said half of the 15 whose answers were made public.

"One hundred and five per cent if they need help," was the wry answer of detecitve Kenneth Johnson of the St. Paul, Minn., police force. The rest declined to estimate in percentages.

Researchers Make Polution Proof Plants

Agricultural scientists can't prevent pollution, but they can develop plants which will tolerate it. In some estimates, air pollutionis blamed for 250 to 500 million dollars in plant losses every year in this country.

Because of this, researchers have directed toward finding pollution - resistant plant stocks which can be used by plant breeders. An example is a recently - released strain of alfalfa which is resistant to ozone. This is needed because some current alfalfa varieties shrivel and die or are severely stunted in the presence of today's concentrations of atmospheric ozone.

Little of Racism In Wallace Vote

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)

Research now suggests Governor George Wallace's showing at the polls has wider implications than some political scientists have been willing to think about.

Some of these studies indicate:

• The role of antiblack attitudes in the selection of Wallace has been exaggerated beyond proper proportions. Speaking more generally, the influence of racial prejudice on electoral decisions has been overemphasized. Seymour M. Lipset, of Harvard University and Earl Raab report that "over half of the Wallace supporters are not willing to say that the progress of Negroes has been 'too fast.'" J. Michael Ross of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Thomas F. Pettigrew and Reeve D. Vanneman, of Harvard, making a special study of the northern voter, report that those with strong racial feelings were only slightly (10 per cent) more likely to give Wallace a high rating. Furthermore, polls have indicated that the net gain for Wallace does not indicate that widespread "defections" of Democrats and Independents in the urban North can be specifically attributed to racially motivated discontent with federal integration policies under Democratic administrations.

Curiously, Ross, Pettigrew and Vanneman say their analysis of the opinion polls suggests to them that racially discontented voters prefer Richard Nixon over Wallace, and that this pattern becomes stronger at higher educational levels.

• Wallace's appeal extends much further into the middle class than predicted, though stress by many writers on the low educational level of many Wallace supporters has obscured that fact.

Actually, Ross, Pettigrew and Vanneman report that the Wallace phenomenon "as a dynamic process tends to find new support among the more active participants from the middle of the class hierarchy rather than (among) its most disadvantaged and apathetic members."

• Wallace's support has been heavily dependent on a specific issue — the problem of order in an urban society. Richard M. Scammon and Ben I. Wattenburg, in describing the Wallace phenomenon, claim that the "social issue" has replaced traditional economic concerns and voters are now primarily influenced by fear and anxiety about the deteriorating fabric of American society, as demonstrated in urban riots, campus unrest, and drugs.

Some researchers seem to suggest that a part of the Wallace vote at least is a rearguard action led by groups who seek to stem the direction of change through political means.

• The size of the Wallace vote in the under-30 generation was surprisingly high.

• Surveys in the north indicate men generally are more disposed toward Wallace than women.

• Wallace does not exert a mass appeal that uproots voters from their traditional loyalties.

Some research men find Wallace secures more support from Catholics than Protestants. Others come up with the opposite conclusion.

To sum up, Ross, Pettigrew and Vanneman come to the conclusion that the available data, when analyzed, does not match the conventional portrait of the Wallace supporter driven by racial hatred and political alienation.

Improved Job Picture Expected At MU-Rolla

ROLLA — A "marked improvement" for new graduates during the coming year is anticipated by Larry Nuss, director of placement and industry relations at the University of Missouri —Rolla.

He bases his predictions on a substantial increase this fall in employer requests for job interviews and in expected needs reported by key employers.

Nuss reports that the 1972 graduate fared somewhat better than his 1971 counterpart. "In spite of a reduction in the number of campus interviews, placements at graduation time were improved for the May class. Starting salary averages increased four per cent over 1971 at the bachelor's level."

The following fields showed significant increases in average monthly starting salaries, according to Nuss: metallurgical engineering ($884 vs. $820), petroleum engineering ($991 vs. $930), engineering management ($904 vs $864) and applied mathematics ($818 vs. $744). The most significant gain in starting salaries was at the Ph.D. level where monthly averages climbed from $1,007 in December, 1970, to $1,498 in May, 1972, an increase of 48 per cent.

"In some disciplines, our UMR starting salaries were practically identical with national averages for 1971-72," Nuss adds. "Our UMR rate of gain for engineering and science starting salaries was four per cent, compared to less than one per cent nationally.

The number of offers for employment rose substantially over the previous year, both on the UMR campus and nationally. Both local and national survey figures showed gains ranging from 12 per cent at the bachelor's level to 32 per cent at the master's and 44 per cent at the doctoral.

To the Editor of Sikeston Standard-

This is in regard to Rev. Dale speaking of mans need of Jesus. Granted he does, but also does the woman in the married homes. Busy washing diapers working, washing, ironing, scrimping to pay bills doing general house work also. Mows the lawn washes windows, paints, does anything and everything to make a home for her man. I am near 87 years old, blind and cripled, but still trying to make a home. Rev. Dale you remember this old saying, 'the hands that rock the cradle rules the world? Good or bad they really do. I have lived from Chesapeake Bay to Boston Harbor and worked so I believe I have seen a few homes, also I have lived on Western Coast as far south as Mexico, as far north as Canada. So, Rev. I say the woman needs Jesus also. And I thank you for taking time to read this scrawl.

Dear Editor:

Inflation is cheating the innocent old, retired and widowed people who live on returns from savings accounts, annuities and Social Security. The Resources of all of these helpless people are being shamefully and pitilessly expropriated via the shrinking dollar.

This is all brought on by the "Spenders" in Congress who are wildly spending beyond tax income in what is known as "Deficit Financing". According to Congressman Wilbur Mills, "Deficit Spending is the sole basic cause of inflation."

We must put an end to this shameful curse of apocalyptical Government Spending.

Sincerely,
C.C. Moseley,
President

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — They haven't even finished building the new Communications complex on the University of Texas campus, and it's already starting to rust. But architects are pleased.

It's a fairly new construction process, using what's known as weathering steel. It starts out looking rather nondescript, begins to streak as the rusting starts, and within six months or a year becomes a uniform orange-brown.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Which Are Most Effective?

Seeking Alternatives to the Pill

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I donate blood to a blood bank once or twice a year. Do they check for syphilis? Should I be secure in not having a disease since I give blood? I recently broke up with a man I expected to marry as I am quite sure he's been cheating on me. I'm not promiscuous. I do get a physical about every six months. Would my doctor know through lab tests and pelvic exams that I am in good health. I'm in my 40s and am ashamed to say that I know so little about this subject. I do read about it and it scares me although I haven't any physical evidence to warrant my worries.

Dear Reader — Yes, the blook bank tests all blood it collects for syphilis. In the first few weeks of infection the tests can be negative and sometimes in individuals who have had it for several years, the tests can be negative. But with regular examinations such as you described it is most unlikely that you would have a negative test and still have syphilis.

Although a blood test is now being developed for gonorrhea, at present it is not available and the test has to be made from a culture obtained during the pelvic examination. Without the culture test the pelvic examination might be negative and the woman still could have gonorrhea.

About 80 per cent of the women who have gonorrhea have no symptoms, which is one reason that the disease has gotten out of hand and exists in epidemic proportions in this country. A new office culture test method is available now which should make it easy for practicing doctors to determine if a woman has gonorrhea or not, even if she has no symptoms and there's no good evidence of it on the physical examination. If you're worried about it, why don't you ask your doctor to test you for it.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Is there anything that can be done to remove a keloid scar. Recently I had some moles removed from my face and back and now they have healed into a keloid scar. My doctor says they are hereditary. They just look terrible.

Dear Reader — A keloid scar is an overgrowth of the scar tissue even to the point of forming masses or tumors. They more often occur before age 35 and particularly in individuals with dark skin.

If they are cut away, there is a great chance that they will just come back again, unless they are done in later years and then, with increased age, they are less likely to recur.

For this reason, most doctors who remove keloid scars like to use X-ray or other treatment over the fresh operation area, and for sometime thereafter to try to prevent a recurrence of the keloids. X-ray therapy is not very beneficial in treating an old keloid and usually must be used with new surgery.
